Budget To Back Burner

Nebraskans now know what has top priority among the important bills remaining for action by the Legislature in the last eight days of this session

Is top priority accorded the all important operational budget bills or the state s capital construction package for the coming year?

Of course not

First things first

The budget bills — which had been scheduled by Speaker Jules Burbach for immediate consideration during the session s waning days — were shoved back Friday upon the mandate of an overwhelming majority of senators who recognize a comparatively narrow issue and a powerful lobby when they see them

Upon the insistence of Sens Loran Schmit and John DeCamp lawmakers Friday threw out their rules gutted LB434 (nee meatpacker payment bill) which was at second stage floor consideration and substituted the provisions of LB703 a physicians protection bill which is the Nebraska Medical Association s answer to the malpractice problem The malpractice issue thus jumped to the head of the class — ahead of budget considerations political and lobbying reform and everything else Debate on malpractice resumes today

Although amendments have somewhat watered down the original rigid limitations on a medical negligence victim s right to recovery several questionable provisions still remain including a limitation on dollar damages a victim could recover

Lengthy debate on the NMA bill is promised while other bills relating to the malpractice problem wait in the wings Farther back in the wings — almost outside the stage door apparently — are the budget bills which must pass in some form so that state government can operate and the other programs which state tax dollars support can function next year

I have an obligation to use whatever means are available said Sen Schmit in explaining his move to substitute LB703 provisions for the meatpacking bill so that malpractice could enjoy priority debating time It is vital we consider the malpractice issue this year

It is also vital that the state budget and capital construction program be given a decent hearing and debate Those bills should not take a back seat to special interest legislation which while important is not the most crucial still awaiting action by the Unicameral

Last Minute Leap

Better late than never thinks Idaho s Sen Frank Church who last week took a Dagwood Bumstead leap at the Democratic presidential nomination bus and managed to land aboard at the last minute

Church s official announcement came not from the Senate cloak room where so many of his colleagues have announced but from the steps of the courthouse in tiny Idaho City the old home town of his grandfather We like the idea of going home again to announce for the presidency although Birch Bayh did and look where it got him

The strategy for Church assumes success in the late western primaries that will give him leverage at the convention in New York in August It is admittedly a long shot proposition Church stumping the West the past few days will meet his first test here in Nebraska May 11 He will be in the state this week with several more appearances scheduled to follow — although with the Nebraska Democratic primary scene dramatically changed because the Nebraska secretary of state insists he must march in lock-step with the Oregon secretary of state it could well be that Church and many of the Democratic candidates will curtail their schedules here

Church may be viewed by cynics as an opportunist who would capitalize politically on chairing the Senate investigations of the CIA problems and other matters of intrigue But we argue against that being a political plus It was a service to the nation which instead held Church back from an active early presidential candidacy and a chance to begin the race for the nomination on an equal footing with the others

Church s entry again gives some balance to the field of active Democratic candidates and it gives that field one more candidate of unquestioned experience and competence in foreign affairs Church is certainly Sen Jackson s equal in foreign affairs knowledge and experience and his approach to dealing with the world is less abrasive and more to our liking

Church is said to be a senator of superior intellect and high moral standards these to go along with almost 20 years of experience in the Senate at the relatively youthful age of 51

Whether a candidate with such qualifications who pursued and completed his responsibility to the Senate and the nation in the CIA matter before beginning his campaign can make headway in the great delegate race is an interesting question

ON TARGET

By DON WALTON

They won t do it of course

But the responsible thing for the Legislature to do if it is unable to complete work on the major items on its agenda in 60 days is to extend the 1976 session

It would take 40 votes (out of 49) to do it

It might as well take 80

Not in my memory (and it s getting longer than I care to admit) has a Legislature so bogged down in repetitive debate over peripheral issues squandering its 60 legislative days in the process

And that has happened despite the strenuous and repeated efforts of Speaker Jules Burbach to keep the legislative machine moving

Burbach cannot be faulted, for he has led with a firm and fair hand He saw this coming a long time ago and he warned his colleagues, but more of them were talking than listening

The state is not going to fall apart because the Legislature fails to complete the major business on its agenda

There are some who would say that the state actually will be better off because of it

Sadly many senators say the same thing nurturing that inferiority complex which they have almost institutionalized in the legislative branch Then they wonder why the Legislature doesn t rate higher in some public opinion surveys

Obviously there is no need for this session to act on all the bills presented to it

But it would seem it ought to at least render a judgment on the priority measures — and complete its budget work

Completing its appropriations assignment means being in session long enough to take final action if any on gubernatorial veto rejections or reductions

Failing to accomplish both of those tasks would be a failure to do the job for which senators were elected

Maybe with some hard work and long hours in session they can still get the job done within the 60-day limit

Last week s budget debate on the University of Nebraska was not a very instructive process for senators who do not sit on the Appropriations Committee

They were buried in largely meaningless figures with very little explanation of what they would purchase in terms of improvements

With some exceptions (including Doug Bereuter s explanation of increased funding to improve undergradudate education at Lincoln), neither side did a very good job of arguing its case

The process took part of one day and most of the next

In the end senators were given little to judge except a pile of figures So many of them sat on their hands when voting decisions were made

Fifteen didn t vote either way on instructional funding for the Lincoln campus Sixteen sat out the vote on UNO appropriations Fifteen rendered no judgment on the Medical Center budget Twenty-one senators did not vote on the budget for the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources

And 20 senators didn t vote either way on first-round approval for the entire higher education budget bill

It is true that a few of those senators were absent from the legislative chamber on each of those votes — but most of them were there sitting on their hands

My guess is that the floor discussion did not produce the kind of informed debate which many of them wanted in order to make a judgment

Henry On The Outbound Carpet

WASHINGTON — Sometimes it is almost possible to feel sorry for Henry Kissinger Sometimes Almost

Much has been made of his Boston speech charging that conservative critics of detente and liberal opponents of strong defense budgets together will whether they have intended it or not end by wrecking the nation s ability to conduct a strong reative moderate and prudent foreign policy

The tragedy is that he's conceivably right Our national credibility is suffering from the desire of critics on both sides to whip saw Kissinger and his policies But the secretary's own deviousness is partly responsible for motivating this relentless criticism

For example Kissinger complains about those who exaggerate Soviet strength those who suddenly pretend that the Soviets are 10 feet tall Suddenly pretend? Last month the Central Intelligence Agency admitted discovering in late 1975 that the Soviet Union has been devoting approximately twice as much of its Gross National Product (15 to 20%) to military efforts than had been previously estimated (6 to 8 c) According to the Washington Star people all over town are busy re-assessing Except apparently the secretary of state

"HE WAS TAKEN FROM US BEFORE WE REALLY KNEW HIM"

Then there s mounting evidence of Russian naval superiority In a recent interview Captain John Moore, editor of Britain s authoritative annual Jane s Fighting Ships, said I was looking at a map for 1897 when British imperialism was at its height There were lots of black dots on it, each representing a coaling station where British navy and merchant ships could put in Now it s the Russians who have the most marks on the map One especially worried member of the Senate Armed Services Committee Ohio Republican Robert A Taft has just called for a crash 10 year naval program premised on the reality that America is a sea power rather than a land power and that our security is in jeopardy

If Secretary Kissinger had publicly recognized these problems and discussed them with any candor he might be salvageable But even the dollar miscalculations of detente — to say nothing of the strategic pit falls — are coming into focus Washington s Heritage Foundation just released a study on The Economics of Detente by international trade consultant Miles Costick arguing that the economic ramifications of detente have already cost the American consumer $3 3 billion and could cost us our survival as a nation

A supporting introduction — labeling detente "a beguiling illusion" — was written by Dr Ray S Kline, former Director of Intelligence and Research, U S State Department

And of course as a petty corollary there s the evidence that Kissinger — who protests so mightily about some leaks — more than tolerated State Department leaks of classified material to authors of a pro-Kissinger article in Foreign Policy magazine

There is probably no way out The situation seems irretrievable Kissinger has offended the Right with one set of evasions mistakes and misrepresentations and the Left with another Their criticisms are not going to stop A new secretary of state — a man not himself a paramount symbol of deceit — could seek a moratorium on criticism Henry Kissinger cannot

Having correctly identified the attacks of Right and Left as a threat to American foreign policy effectiveness, the secretary of state is, of course, the one man able to furnish a necessary, beginning, partial solution He can resign

A Princess Has Her Problems

NEW YORK — When I was growing up little Princess Margaret Rose was Great Britain s sequel to our Shirley Temple Pretty pixie-like little thing Bit of an upstart In austere wartime she was the comedy relief and while Americans had respect and admiration for her big sister Elizabeth it was little Margaret Rose whom they fancied more

As she grew to teenage, Princess Margaret, flourishing in the spotlight of world attention, became more audacious She began to flirt, she switched from tea to champagne and scotch, went to late-night parties, and apparently became increasingly aware of her important position near the top of the royal totem pole

She began treating some girlhood friends like ladies-in-waiting The British press began to view her as an adolescent primar donna — but they wrote the same amused and fawning copy glorifying 'a radiant Princess Margaret ' and speculating on which of several rich and titled young beaux with or without pimples might be her choice for a husband Meg had graduated from Shirley Temple status to Elizabeth Taylor proportions

In 1955 she reached the height of her power and glory in the world press when she pointed a regal finger at Capt Peter Townsend of the Buckingham Palace equerry contingent and stated That s for me Captain Townsend slim and gaunt and (some said) awed at her decision was a divorced man Princess Margaret was accustomed to getting her own way but this was not the way the Archbishop of Canterbury saw the royal family image Divorce had never been permitted

This was the biggest, most vital most romantic dilemma in the British press since Margaret's Uncle Edward had renounced the throne in 1936 to marry the American divorcee named Wallis From all over the world, thousands of reporters descended on London (myself included) to learn if loveable Princess Margaret would be permitted to wed the courageous pilot who was shot down twice during World War II Would he now be shot down again by the Anglican Church?

☆ ☆ ☆

The suspense in the press was awesome We reporters followed Margaret wherever she went — to Buckingham Palace to St Paul s Cathedral She always was closely guarded and never smiled Thousands of typewriters and teletype machines clacked out stories of high drama and suspense But in the press rooms of Fleet Street hardened editors and reporters verbalized different stories They spoke of that poor devil Townsend who hadn t asked for this high drama and predicted that no one would be more relieved than he if the Archbishop declared the marriage impossible The attitude was that Townsend considerably older and more worldly than Margaret was too fine a fellow to spend his life three paces behind a princess

CAPT PETER TOWNSEND and Margaret Rose . The church said no to the divorced commoner

When the decision came through — matrimony mission impossible — Captain Townsend quietly disappeared No one could ever confirm whether he left England with a sigh of torture or of relief But when I met him a few years ago he revealed that he had shortly thereafter married a Belgian girl and had three children — all of whom I adore ' Refusing to discuss the Princess episode he said Even in this life we have different incarnations — don t you believe that?

In his Princess Margaret incarnation, he was "very much a public figure," now he is "very much a private man, and loving life We don't talk about that other period ever in public — and very rarely in private," he said with a laugh

Princess Margaret was 25 when she lost Peter Townsend She recovered and made headlines again with this and that potential husband until she discovered Tony Armstrong Jones professional photographer in 1959 and married him in a glittering ceremony the following May They have two children aged 14 and 12 and they also have outside interests hers a younger man his a world full of friends and photographable subjects Separation? Divorce? Once again Queen Elizabeth and the Church of England ponder what to do about the princess who inevitably knows her own mind but doesn t seem sure of her heart

JAMES RESTON

Jimmy Carter And The Sandwich Board

WASHINGTON — Jimmy Carter is discovering what Ed Muskie and George McGovern learned to their sorrow in the last Democratic presidential campaign that the role of the front runner is much tougher than the role of the challenger

For once out front, the leading candidate is not only the visible target of all other competing forces who want to shoot him down, but is regarded as "potential president whose every move action and speeches are expected to be 'presidential "

Thus George Romney of Michigan lost his lead by admitting publicly that he had been brain washed by the generals on Vietnam Ted Kennedy lost the White House at Chappaquiddick Ed Muskie lost his lead by losing his temper in the 72 New Hampshire primary and George McGovern almost killed his chances by poor staff work on picking a running mate and defining his welfare policy at the start of the 72 campaign

In his struggle to the front of the Democratic pack this year Carter has scarcely missed a [illegible] but his first major foreign policy speech before the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations was less successful and it illustrates one of his major problems in the last half of the [illegible] campaign

[illegible] audience [illegible] explanation of how he would approach the problems of foreign [illegible] were [illegible] that our role in the world should be what kind of policies and policymakers we shall need in the last years of the 1970s In short he invited a test of his abilities to handle the intricate subtle and dangerous relations with other countries as president of the United States

His Chicago speech was a very bold but disappointing exercise for essentially it was a litany of the sins of the past, a critical and often unfair estimate of the present, and an idealistic almost dreamy view of how to conduct foreign affairs in a world of conflicting nations and ideologies

He proclaimed that our foreign policy today is in greater disarray than at any time in recent history Considering where we were with Johnson and Nixon in Vietnam considering that the Republic is not now at war for the first time in 15 years and that President Sadat has just kicked the Russians out of Cairo this was at least a debatable and maybe even a silly conclusion

Carter was more generous to other countries than he was to our own He was savagely critical of Henry Kissinger s secrecy a popular [illegible] these days though Kissinger has made more speeches defining American policy [illegible] the Congress [illegible] and [illegible]

Carter s comparison [illegible] the world was admirable but greater than his understanding of the problems that face the Washington he wants to preside over as president The people of other nations he said have learned in recent years that they can neither trust what our government says nor predict what it will do

' They have been hurt and disappointed so many times that they no longer know what to believe about the United States They want to respect us They like our people But our people do not seem to be running our government

There is some truth in all this but considering the practical world Carter wants us to deal with not much In Chicago he really thought he was making a presidential speech but actually he made a campaign speech as if he were behind rather than ahead

It was not of course his speech He had a problem Having got out in front in the presidential race he was being asked to get beyond his personality and spirit which have got him where he is and define his foreign policy

So between the 18-hour days flying between Florida New York Washington visiting the newspaper offices shuttling down to North Carolina he got somebody [illegible] to help him [illegible] his approach [illegible] the problems of the world

He was the speaker but Zbigniew Brzezinski was the principal writer He picked a [illegible] Zbig is like Henry Kissinger one of the wisest and most articulate men who have come to the United States from Europe, a teacher at Columbia University, director of the Trilateral Commission which is doing really creative work in getting the United States, Europe and Japan together on their common world problems

PEANUT BUTTER AND JELLY SANDWICH
JIMMY CARTER FOR PRESIDENT
(WE'LL TALK ISSUES AFTER I'M ELECTED)

Long before Jimmy Carter became a front-runner in the presidential campaign he went to the Trilateral meeting in Tokyo and elsewhere but it would probably be wrong to assume that he is an expert on foreign affairs as a result

In the struggle of his campaign Carter is merely going back to this experience to find answers to those who wonder whether as president he could grapple with the problems of the world His Chicago speech didn t answer the question In fact nobody even printed the text which from his point of view was probably lucky He has made great progress to the fore by being dead honest but in Chicago he was pretending and if he pretends he may lose everything

Ballot Action By Republican Irks Democrats

By BOB GUENTHER and PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writers

Picking the presidential candidates who will appear on the Democratic primary ballot has stirred more controversy locally than any of the candidates so far have generated.

The eye of the maelstrom is Secretary of State Allen J. Beermann, a Republican, who on March 15 — three days after the filing deadline for the primary election — again put the names of Sens. Edward Kennedy and Hubert Humphrey on the ballot despite earlier sworn disclaimers that they are not presidential candidates.

All Democrats who were interviewed reacted negatively to Beermann's decision for a number of reasons. Jill Ryan, the First District coordinator for Jimmy Carter's campaign, said the action has "muddied up the water." Some fear Kennedy's inclusion will detract from Frank Church's showing; others say Humphrey could take votes away from Henry Jackson.

Winner Could Have No Delegates

Hypothetically, under Beermann's decision, the candidate who captures the greatest number of votes in the primary could go to the convention without a single Nebraska delegate pledged to him.

This is for two reasons: one, Humphrey and Kennedy have refused to approve the entry of delegates pledged to them on the Nebraska ballot; and secondly, Beermann did not put them back on the ballot until after the delegates' filing deadline had passed.

State Sen. Frank Lewis of Bellevue, a delegate candidate for the national convention who is committed to Jackson, called it "an extremely bad move."

Don Geis of Lincoln, coordinator of Church's Nebraska campaign, said Beermann was "legally right, but morally he leaves one heck of a lot to be desired."

Dick White, state Democratic Party chairman, called it in "the nature of a 'dirty trick' to have them on the ballot."

Beermann Cites Sign

The fear that Kennedy or Humphrey will detract from the other nine Democrats' showing in the May 11 primary is indicative, Beermann said, that there is widespread support for their candidacy. Consequently, they belong on the ballot, he said.

State law gives the secretary of state discretion in deciding who should appear on the presidential primary ballot based on his reading of the national news media.

Anyone who feels the list is not complete can get another name on the ballot by collecting 300 signatures from the three congressional districts. Those who do not want to appear on the ballot can get off by filing a sworn affidavit.

Kennedy and Humphrey filed such affidavits, after Beermann announced on Feb. 11 that he would include them.

Oregon Put Them On Ballot

Then, on March 12, the day of Nebraska's filing deadline, Oregon placed Kennedy and Humphrey on that state's primary ballot. By this action they "became" candidates, and Beermann said he was forced to put their names back on the ballot on March 15.

That action has aroused both amazement and anger.

An examination of the situation has revealed:

— Beermann says Asst. Atty. Gen. Terry Schaaf told him he had "no choice" but to put Kennedy and Humphrey back on the ballot in light of Oregon's action.

Informed of Beermann's statement, Schaaf said, "Well, maybe he and I should visit. I don't think it's fair to characterize our advice to him as giving him 'no choice' but to place them on the ballot. I don't remember being asked to render a decision."

— What about California Gov. Jerry Brown who March 13 announced his candidacy? Why wasn't he included?

Beermann noted that Brown isn't officially on any ballot as yet.

He said Brown was not on his Feb. 11 list, has not yet been placed on California's ballot and hence cannot be placed among this spring's list of Democratic presidential contenders.

If Brown does indeed become an active candidate as he says, by his late announcement he could defeat the purpose of the Nebraska law. The law was changed to prevent a recurrence of the 1968 primary when Nelson Rockefeller ducked the Nebraska Republican primary for fear of a poor showing.

A 1967 attorney general's opinion does not cite the constraints which Beermann said force him to keep Brown off the ballot. It says: "The said statute sets out no date for you to make your determination (of presidential contenders) . . . From the language used, this determination must ultimately be discretionary with you . . . (B)ecause potential presidential candidates may not become known until a relatively short period of time before the primary, your decision could not effectively be made too early . . ."

— In 1972 Ted Kennedy was placed on Oregon's primary ballot a day or so prior to Nebraska's filing deadline.

Beermann did not place Kennedy on the ballot here that year because Kennedy was an "involuntary" candidate and because it "wouldn't be fair to people who would like to file as delegates committed to him."

Now His Reasoning Is Different

This year his reasoning is different.

It's true, he said, that some of the Democrats who appear on the ballot might not be candidates for president.

"The primary has nothing to do with what the candidates want. It has to do with what the people want. People shouldn't be denied a full range of choices," Beermann said. "Recent polls show Kennedy and Humphrey are getting 30-40% of the support."

In the interest of a full range of choices, Beermann was asked why John Connally of Texas wasn't placed on the Republican ticket or Pennsylvannia Gov. Milton Shapp or West Virginia Sen. Robert Byrd on the Democratic?

Beermann said he didn't consider them serious candidates. Shapp, he noted, has withdrawn from Pennsylvania's ballot and Byrd is turning his interests toward party leadership posts.

Still, Ellen McCormack, the anti-abortion candidate, remains on the Democratic ballot despite her weak primary showings.

Beermann countered that she would've been on the ballot regardless of his actions. He said McCormack supporters were ready to present 700 signatures to place her on the ballot.

Four Thai Protesters Killed

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A bomb exploded on Sunday amid thousands of anti-American student protesters, killing at least four of them and wounding 82, authorities said. Other students then kicked and beat a young man they believed to be the bomber.

Following the bombing, opposing rightist vocational school students began an armed vigil behind sandbag barricades, and the Thai cabinet debated but rejected declaring a state of national emergency.

The violence came after Prime Minister Kukrit Pramoj on Saturday granted permission for 270 American military advisors to remain in the country indefinitely and allowed four more months for withdrawal of the other 3,900 U.S. servicemen.

Saturday was the deadline for withdrawal of all U.S military personnel from Thailand agreed to after Communist-backed regimes came to power in Indochina. But instead of enforcing the deadline, the government announced the extension.

About 6,000 members of the powerful National Student Center of Thailand and their supporters marched to the U.S. Embassy Sunday, where leaders demanded that the United States give assurances that the new deadline would be met.

Along the four-mile route of the march, an explosive hurled into the massed demonstrators peppered the victims, who were rushed to nearby hospitals.

Associated Press photographer Neal Ulevich said students kicked and beat a youth they suspected of hurling the bomb, but officials said the suspect was later released from police custody for lack of evidence.

The deaths were expected to mount from what observers thought was a fragmentation-type explosive that tore the bodies of its mostly young victims.

Meanwhile, more than 1,000 students of the opposing Vocational Students Center of Thailand and other staunchly nationalistic groups vowed to demonstrate throughout the night at Bangkok's Democracy Monument, where others joined them from the provinces. They called for the arrest of a student leader involved in the demonstration, saying he had aided the Communists.

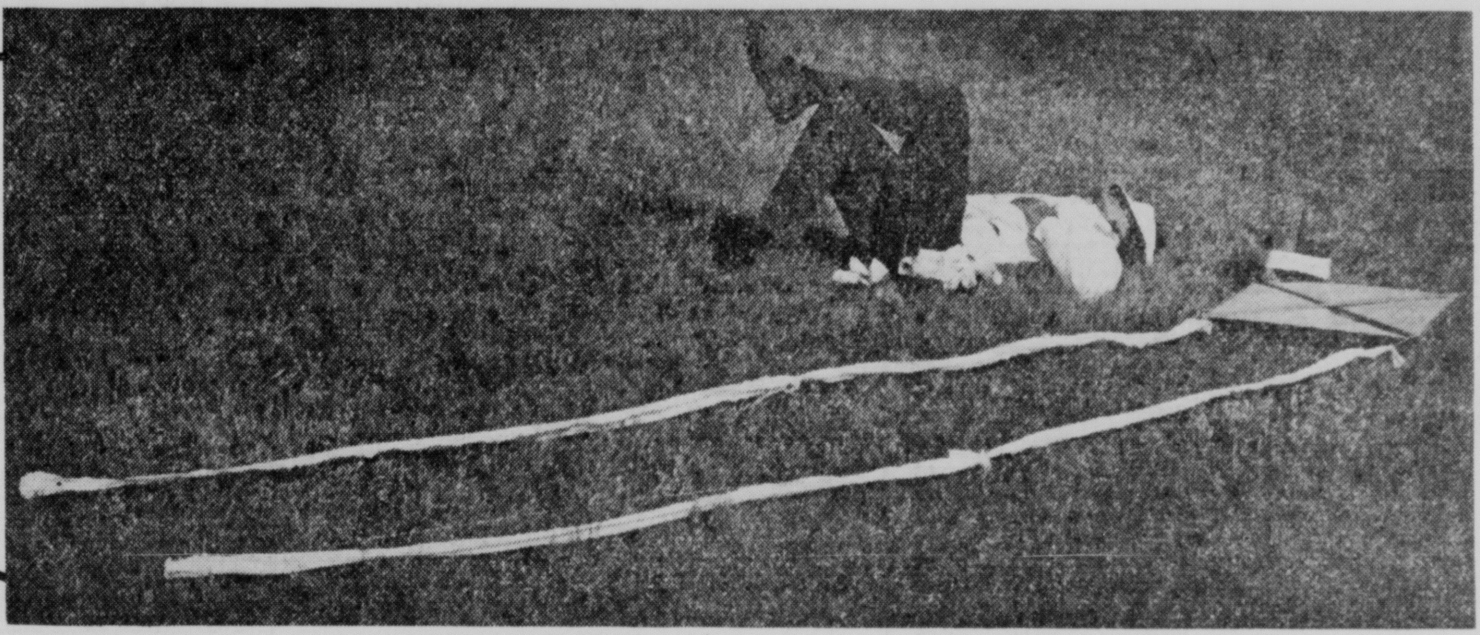
A U.S. spokesman said all American military operations in Thailand not related to the withdrawal had ceased in accordance with a Thai demand.

In Washington the State Department said Sunday it hoped "friendly relations" with Thailand would be sustained despite disagreements on the status of U.S. military forces in the country.

At the embassy demonstration, about 100 unarmed riot police guarded the gates while another 30 armed troopers stood by inside the 10-acre compound.

The students carried posters which read, "We don't need your bloody imperialistic aid" and "Uncle Sam is a dirty old man," while one student leader shouted through a loudspeaker from atop a truck, "We want the Americans to get out within four months, not 40 years. We don't want the U.S. to support the Thai military. This building (the embassy) has controlled our Thai military for decades."

Kite Fliers Becalmed



Although some contestants were determined to wait for a telling blow, the sixth annual kite flying contest was postponed Sunday for a lack of wind. Some hopefuls, like the one pictured here, stretched out in the sunshine and fell asleep waiting for the wind that never came.

The contest has been rescheduled for 2 p.m. next Sunday south of the lake in Holmes Park. (Staff photo by Dave Kennedy.)

NU Regent Says Budget Criticisms Not True

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

To critics of the proposed 23% budget increase for the University of Nebraska, Regent Ed Schwartzkopf said their ammunition is based on misinterpreted facts, and he posed two main arguments to justify the dollar need.

First, NU "is one of the few state agencies that generates wealth" for Nebraska. The university is "not a taker," as the Lincoln regent characterized most other state agencies.

Aside from NU graduates' increased productivity and role in the economy, he said the university also generates wealth via internationally acclaimed research that benefits Nebraskans,

"Our state must face up to the realities of supply and demand in the academic community," Schwartzkopf issued the second part of his challenge in an interview.

'Kids Shortchanged'

"We're shortchanging the kids," he said concerning "fiscal gyrations" that led partly to the continuing exodus of top administrators and faculty, including the recent resignations by 10% of the Lincoln campus Business Administration College staff.

"Improvement in the quality of education comes by retaining outstanding, competent faculty and administrators, and being able to attract" more like them, Schwartzkopf said.

He pointed to a letter written to NU President D. B. Varner from Ronald L. Smith, dean of UNL Business Administration.

Dr. Smith said his faculty members were lured away by salary increases as high as 42.8% at other schools; some now "are receiving unsolicited telephone offers as word spreads that Nebraska salaries make our university vulnerable to raids by other schools.

'Losses Affect Program'

"Higher salaries in state and federal government have attracted three faculty members away from Nebraska," Dr. Smith wrote. The total losses have "seriously affected the quality of our programs."

Dean Smith also cited a "lag in staff services," with only 2.2% of his total budget going for clerical support, travel, supplies and equipment.

"Even positive action now will not forestall additional losses of faculty," Smith wrote Varner and NU executives.

Schwartzkopf said, "We cannot improve the quality of education at NU by talking to ourselves about how great our educational program is."

He offered an analogy to Cornhusker football, saying "we not only let folks know how great we are, we show them."

Schwartzkopf said he wants assurance of two things for NU graduates. First, if they win a terminal degree, he wants them to be able to "compete for the job of their choice on equal footing" with graduates of any institution.

And second, if they pursue graduate studies, they should be able to "gain admittance to any graduate school of their choice." Anything less robs them, he said.

The same applies to faculty, Schwartzkopf said, citing the example of dentistry Prof. Connell L. Marsh: "A guy, to move up, has to leave the institution and come back."

Schwartzkopf, echoing a Varner letter to NU staff, challenged conclusions that Gov. J. James Exon and his staff have drawn from the same set of statistics NU used as its 1976-77 budget basis.

The regent referred to a statement which said that since 1969-70, NU's general fund (state tax) budget has increased 105%, from $37.5 million to $77 million, while enrollment was static.

Statement Refuted

Schwartzkopf said "the fact is" that enrollment reached a record 22,386 students at UNL and increased 18% systemwide during the 16 years.

"The real irony of our increased enrollment is that because of the cash ceilings imposed on NU, the additional revenue generated by increased enrollment could not be used to hire additional faculty to teach additional students, or to improve the quality of education."

Rather, Schwartzkopf said, those additional dollars above projections "went into our state's general fund."

He said Exon and state officials criticize the student-faculty class ratio after erroneously including NU staff members who don't teach (such as county agents or outstate ag personnel and researchers)l

Regarding NU's share of general fund increases, he said $2.5 million of it resulted when the Nebraska Psychiatric Institute was transferred from the state to NU. Without NPI, he said NU budgets rose 98%, not 105%.

Schwartzkopf contrasted that with state executive budget figures, with increases during the same six-year period for state agencies ranging from 131% to 300%, and one exception at 75%.

"I am not suggesting that the increases for these agencies were not necessary or unwarranted," but rather pointing out trends in agency operating costs, including NU he said.

"It is time we stop talking about what a great expense" NU is and "start recognizing it for the great wealth it generates," Schwartzkopf said.

'Branding Iron' In Lyons Burns

Lyons (AP) — Fire destroyed the Branding Iron Steakhouse in Lyons early Sunday.

Lee Appleby, assistant fire chief, said the cause of the blaze was not determined. Firemen from Lyons, Pender, Walthill, Decatur, Tekamah and Oakland fought the flames more than five hours.

Appleby said the steakhouse, owned by Dennis Morgan, was a total loss.

NU Stadium, Park Concerts Couldn't Comply With Rules

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

If the city's proposed "mass gathering" ordinance covered Memorial Stadium, Pershing Auditorium or Pioneers Park, there would be no Big Red football games, no Ice Capades show and no Pinewood Bowl concerts.

None of the facilities could meet all requirements listed in the ordinance.

But luckily for Big Red Fans and outdoor theatre buffs, the ordinance does not cover government owned property.

The mass gathering ordinance was drafted by the city attorney's office with help from the County-City Health Department to cover any gathering of more than 500 people on private property which lasts more than three hours.

The proposed law was evidently a response to last summer's requests for music festivals — both rock and blue grass.

Hamilton, Robinson Opposed

But County Commissioner Bruce Hamilton and Councilman John Robinson believe the rules are too strict.

"Are we making rules to protect people or to discourage gatherings?" Hamilton asked last week.

And the proposal is certainly stricter than any regulations covering some of the government-owned facilities for "mass gatherings."

Take the toilet rule. The ordinance now says that for any event of less than four hours there must be one toilet for every 300 people expected.

City-owned Pershing Auditorium, with a 52 stand-up or sit-down capacity, and Memorial Stadium with an amazing 211 water closets and 589 urinal spaces, could qualify.

But Pinewood Bowl has a measly 10 toilets (or urinals) which means that the maximum crowd, under the proposed law, would be 3,000.

Yet the bowl crowd size gets up to 10,000 and Park Superintendent Dick Hilligus feels that 7,000 is a comfortable crowd size for the facility.

Space Part of Rule

And then there's the question of space. Any woman who has tried to squeeze a size 13 posterior into Memorial stadium seats for an entire game, knows there is not 30 square feet for every person — that's the "mass gathering" rule.

"Thirty square feet for 76,000 people?" asked Don Bryant University of Nebraska sports information director. Then he laughed.

Even the outdoor Pinewood Bowl could only accomodate 2,500 people if the park department adhered to the 30 square feet proposal. And Pershing Auditorium could make the space requirement only if the hallways were included.

The management at none of the three facilities provided "site maps" to all participants, nor do any of them have one parking space for every three people expected to attend. Both requirements are part of the ordinance, up for public hearing at Monday's City Council meeting.

Children Need Adults

All three allow children under 12 to attend events without an adult, something that would be outlawed for mass gatherings (including church revivals) on private property.

The ordinance a misdemeanor which carries a maximum penalty of a $500 fine or up to six months in jail, makes the mass gathering permit holder responsible for seeing that no participants have alcohol or drugs.

Those in charge of Pershing, Pinewood Bowl and the stadium have no drinking and drug rules and discourage this kind of activity.

"But there is no way we are going to prevent all 76,000 people from drinking," Bryant realistically admitted.

Since the ordinance was evidently aimed at outdoor music concerts, there is a noise decibel limitation proposed by the health department.

Noise Levels Posted

If the noise is to exceed 70 decibels, signs must be posted and nothing above 95 decibels is permitted.

But health department noise samples show that concerts at Pinewood Bowl exceeded the 70 decibel limit and Pershing Auditorium rock concert noise was above the 95 maximum.

The young people simply wouldn't go if the sound is down," said Pershing Manager Ike Hoig.

Even Memorial Stadium is not lily white on noise. Big Red fans cheered above the 95 decibel limit, according to the health department noise meters.

Orderly Bill-Processing Possible, Mahoney Says

By United Press International

Could the Legislature devise a way to process all bills in an orderly fashion even in a 60-day session?

Sen Eugene Mahoney said he thinks it could by adoption of one rule imposing stringent but what he considers practical limits on debate.

"What the Legislature needs is an ironclad rule that, with rare exceptions, bills and resolutions will never be debated for more than one hour on general file," he said. "Let the introducer and chief opponent each have a half hour and let them allocate the time."

General file is the first point of floor debate.

Mahoney said he would make exceptions for some pieces of legislation, citing medical malpractice as an example.

But he said it was a "disgrace" the lawmakers spent 2½ days arguing about a resolution calling on Congress to balance the budget.

"We've wasted days on debates of that kind and now we're paying for it by not having time to consider even all of the senators' priority bills," he said.

Tuesday is supposed to be the final day for debate of bills on general file Friday afternoon, sponsors of 26 measures they consider highly important were standing by hoping their legislation somehow could be worked into the schedule during the session's waning days.

Budget Bills Next

Speaker Jules Burbach scheduled budget bills to come up immediately after disposition of Sen. Loran Schmit's malpractice proposal. After that, he said, he plans to bring up five bracketed bills, one of which is the state aid to schools measure.

Several appropriations bills are listed next on his schedule, followed by several more which he categorized as of "general interest" One of the latter is LB987, the Nebraska political accountability and disclosure act.

The school aid bill, LB631, appears to be in serious trouble.

Sales Tax Hike Looms

There are some lawmakers who figured that the $15 million increase in aid—along with some other appropriations bills still to be processed—would boost spending well past the level that would trigger an increase of the 2.5% sales tax to 3%.

Some Omaha senators tuned themselves out of the aid bill after the Legislature refused to earmark $2.5 million of the money to help the Omaha school district buy buses for desegregation.

It's also a political fact of life incumbent senators running for re-election dislike having voters identify them as supporters of bills which caused a tax increase

Schmit Predicts OK Of Malpractice Bill

Bellwood — Members of the Legislature are not going to go home without passing some good, basic legislation on malpractice insurance, Sen. Loran Schmit predicted Sunday.

"The great majority of the members of the body proved Friday that they recognize the seriousness of the problem and want to deal with it." Schmit said "I am sure they will stick with malpractice legislation long enough on Monday to move it on across the board. They recognize that unless we enact some kind of basic legislation this session we will be shirking our duty

"The big winners on malpractice legislation will be the million and a half people of Nebraska, because this legislation will help insure continued high quality health care at minimum cost.

"The bill I am pushing is a compromise that gives up a lot that the doctors wanted. It is not what any one special group wanted It is basic legislation that lays the groundwork for meeting the malpractice problem

"Major portions of the bill are the medical review panel and the medical qualifications commission. Both will contribute to better medicine in Nebraska.

"The $500,000 limit on awards included in the bill provides a means where insurance companies can recognize the extent of their liabilities and adjust premiums fairly according to that exposure

"We have attempted to modify sections of the bill to meet the objections of those who say it is unconstitutional.

"I am sure that passage of my bill this session does not mean that we are through with malpractice legislation in the Legislature. There will be a need for some continuing interim studies on it, and we will have to monitor the effectiveness of our legislation carefully to see how well it works.

"But my bill is a beginning and I am sure the members of the Legislature are going to meet their responsibility by passing it."

Ford Campaign Committeeman Says Callaway Should Resign

Omaha (UPI) — Howard "Bo" Callaway should resign immediately as President Ford's campaign manager to prevent investigations into his alleged misconduct from becoming a "sideshow to the main event," a Ford campaign advisory committee member said Sunday.

Richard L. "Dick" Herman of Omaha said "I'm sure that he's thinking about resigning if he already hasn't tendered his resignation."

Callaway asked that he be suspended until investigations are completed into allegations he used his influence while secretary of the Army to win favorable government treatment for a Colorado ski resort he owns and used government aircraft to fly into a nearby airport.

Herman said, "I'm not saying there's anything wrong " But apparently there's going to be an investigation of these activities on several levels I don't think this should be the focus of a presidential campaign.

Ford Has To Be Focus

"The focus has to be on the candidate Any external impacts have to be eliminated.

"I think Bo should resign, not because he did or didn't do a job "

However, if Callaway even remained as a suspended campaign manager, Herman said "with the investigations coming up he will become a sideshow to the main event — the campaign — and we can't have that going on in the same ring."

'I'm Sure He'll Be Helpful'

As to Callaway's future in the campaign, Herman said. "I'm sure Bo Callaway will be as helpful in all regards as he can be. But precisely what role he will play, that's something that will have to be looked at down the line "

Herman said a decision on Callaway's replacement "has to be the President's."

"Rogers Morton has indicated he would take it." Herman said. "Rog would do a good job."

Morton is now Ford's political liason aide at the White House — a position Herman said would have to be filled if "Rog decides to move over and wear the other hat."

Two Sets Needed

"The President has to have two sets of individuals, one to manage the campaign and the other in the executive branch of government to contact — somebody who knows the President's schedule, for example," Herman said, "and who has to be able to work with the President's campaign committee on activities which will assist in his nomination and election.

"And that's what Rog Morton came in to do."

Herman, a trucking executive who handled the arrangements for the controversial 1972 GOP convention, said Callaway's "goal was to hold the cost of the staff down until we actually got into the campaign effort, which he did do "

Not Everybody Happy

"Callaway made some statements which some people liked and some people didn't," Herman said. "He brought in some people and gradually got more and more into the organizational operations that are necessary to run a primary. Bo Callaway started putting it together."

Herman said he hasn't conferred with Stuart Spencer, who has temporarily replaced Callaway, but "indications are Stu doesn't want the job fulltime."

Policeman's Life 'Not So Bad' For Ex-New Yorkers In Valley

Valley (AP) — "It's not so bad," said Tony Maniaci once a patrolman in New York City, of Valley where he and a fellow policeman found jobs when they were dismissed when the financial debacle hit

"You can see cows from the window," he said pointing from the $180 a-month apartment he shares with former New Yorker Joe Phillipattis "In New York all you would see is buildings and more buildings "

But after two months on the job in this small community of 1,600, Maniaci sounded homesick

"I miss walking along the boardwalk at Coney Island smelling the salt air and the hot dogs It's hard to leave New York It's hard to leave the neighborhood you grew up in Home is where you know every street name, where you know people "

Maniaci, 22, and Phillipattis, 23, joined Valley's police force after reading of the vacancies in a newspaper. They had been patrolmen in the Manhattan North district until they found themselves out of jobs six months ago

Gone are the stickups in the elevators, junkies in stairwells, rapists on rooftops and the stench of garbage in dark hallways Gone, too is a salary of almost $20,000 Their pay now is $8,600

The two said they have made about 16 arrests, none of them worth talking about

Saturday night, when revelers spill out of Valley's five drinking spas, the two are waiting

"Everybody is in the bars When they leave somebody gets loud so you ask them to quiet down and they do," Maniaci

The job's routine for a New Yorker has been followed by after-hours boredom although Phillipattis said, since the local Dairy Queen opened up "there is more to do—like a place to eat "

Authorities said the two apparently spent Saturday night in Dodge City, Kan., then split up

Police said Talbert had been jailed on two counts of breaking and entering. They said Anderson had been held pending his trial on two counts of burglary

Moslems Capture Hotel In Vicious Battle

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Moslem gunmen advancing behind armored cars captured the 25-story Holiday Inn in a vicious battle Sunday with Christian Phalangists who had used the seaside hotel as a fortress since October.

Police sources said more than 40 persons were killed in the fighting for the hotel, including 12 Christian defenders. Another 13 persons were reported killed and 26 wounded in the day's fighting outside of Beirut.

Brig. Aziz Ahdab, who proclaimed himself provisional military governor in a March 11 coup, said he had formed a 14-man military command council aimed at forcing Christian President Suleiman Franjieh to resign. Franjieh was in the presidential palace five miles east of Beirut being defended by nearly 2,000 loyal soldiers and militiamen.

Ahdab said in a communique the new command was formed to coordinate "expected operations" should attempts at a peaceful political settlement fail. The council includes members of Ahdab's Beirut area command staff.

Seizure of the Holiday Inn was a major psychological victory for left-wing Moslems in Lebanon's 11-month civil war that has killed more than 12,000 persons. Moslem quarters erupted into joyous gun firing as news of the takeover spread.

Screaming leftist youths, waving Soviet-made AK47 assault rifles, poured into the lobby of the 500-room hotel, running by the mutilated body of a defender. One Moslem attacker kicked the body, shouting curses at the dead man.

Heavy explosions from 106mm recoilless rifle shells shook the neighborhood as retreating forces of the right-wing Phalange party fought back from nearby strongholds still under their control.

The Phalange's "Voice of Lebanon" radio said Christian reinforcements were on the way.

The strategically located hotel sits on a ridge overlooking the area and provides a perfect redoubt for snipers and machinegunners.

Phalange gunmen, from the largest Christian militia in the war, held onto the nearby Starco office tower and unfinished Hilton Hotel. They raked the Holiday Inn with machinegun fire after the Moslems took over.

The Moslem capture of the fire-blackened, bullet-pocked hotel came as mainline Moslem politicians were predicting the possibility of an early end to the fighting through renewed Syrian mediation.

Premier Rashid Karami, former Premier Saeb Salam and Parliament Speaker Kamel Assad returned Saturday night from long talks with President Hafez Assad of Syria, working to arrange a compromise settlement to the bloody strife. They declared themselves optimistic.

But Kamal Junblatt, the most prominent leader of Moslem leftists, declared that he was forming a united army of leftist militias in cooperation with the Palestinian guerrillas sympathetic to Moslem demands for increased power in the Christian-dominated Lebanese system.

Palestinian guerrillas from Yasir Arafat's Fatah group participated in the Holiday Inn takeover, along with Lebanese youths from the "Ambushers" militia. It is headed by Ibrahim Koleilat, an ally of Junblatt, and Ahmed al-Khatib, leader of group of renegades from the regular Lebanese army.

"This is part of our military plan," declared an Ambushers spokesman standing in the still smoking hotel driveway.

Copter Crashes Take Ten Lives

By The Associated Press

Ten persons died in Army helicopter crashes near Ft. Benning, Ga., and Ft. Campbell, Ky., during weekend storms. One man was injured and another was missing, officials said Sunday.

The bodies of seven soldiers were found in the ruins of a helicopter that crashed about 20 miles north of Dahlonega, Ga. Ft. Benning information officer Ben Walburn said the aircraft apparently struck Aiken Mountain.

He said one soldier was hospitalized in Blairsville after he walked into the Union County Sheriff's Department and notified authorities the helicopter was down in the vicinity of Hicks Gap, Ga. Another crewman was missing, he said.

The hospitalized soldier's condition was not immediately available.

Bad weather hampered search operations Saturday, and the search was continued on Sunday for the missing man, Walburn said.

At Ft. Campbell, a spokesman said a helicopter which crashed in a windstorm Saturday, killing all three persons aboard, should not have been flying.

"Aircraft were not supposed to be up at that time," said Maj. Frank C. McGourty, information officer. "Severe weather warnings were put out. Whether he (the pilot) actually got them or not, who knows?"

Officials identified the Ft. Campbell victims as Capt. William L. Allen, 32, of Clarksville, Tenn., the pilot; WO George Reynolds, 24, of Albuquerque, N.M., the co-pilot; and Spec.4 David G. Cowan, 27, of Vine Grove, Ky.

Identification of the Ft. Benning victims was withheld pending notification of relatives.

N. Y. Times Summary

One Reform In Effect

Madrid — The Spanish government has adopted four of the seven political reforms it proposed when it came to power three months ago, but only one of them is in effect. The government, which outlined its plan of political changes in January, has been caught in a crossfire of criticism. Groups on the left say that its performance is inadequate, while those on the right fear that it is undermining the political and social system established under Franco. The only one of the seven reforms now in effect is a decree that limited last summer's antiterrorism law.

Brown Taking Gamble

Los Angeles — Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California, sensing that the country is ready to turn to a new generation of leadership, is taking a long-shot gamble that his ability to control the 280-member California delegation to the Democratic national convention this summer could persuade the party to nominate him for president. Brown, who is 37 years old and one of the most popular governors in California's history, said in an interview that he has not decided whether to expand his favorite-son candidacy into a wider campaign in other state primaries.

New Demos For Udall

New York — Rep. Morris K. Udall of Arizona was endorsed for the Democratic presidential nomination by the New Democratic Coalition, which seeks to speak for the liberal wing of the New York State Democratic Party. The endorsement was voted by 70% of about 200 party members attending a state delegate assembly in Manhattan.

Second Bomb Factory Turned Up

London (AP) — Scotland Yard's antiterrorism squad announced Sunday it has found a second Irish guerrilla bomb factory and detained five men and a woman following five bomb incidents in London this month.

The seizure of explosives, detonators and other bomb-making materials in a house at Lavender Hill in south London came Friday night, two days after the discovery of another bomb factory in a nearby neighborhood, Scotland Yard said.

Sources said both raids were the result of investigations stemming from the capture last Monday of Adrian Vincent Donnelly, 24, who shot himself in the stomach after setting off a bomb in a subway train and shooting the train driver dead in an ensuing chase.

10½-Year-Old Girl Pleads For Peace

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A little Lebanese girl wounded in the leg by a sniper's bullet urged her country's leaders Sunday to "do as we do in school" and close themselves into a room and not leave until they resolve the civil war.

Ghada Yasmine decided that after 11 months of war, 12,400 deaths and no end in sight, it was time her voice was heard. She set down her thoughts in a letter to the newspaper L'Orient-Le Jour.

"My name is Ghada Yasmine. I am 10½ years old. I have just been wounded in the leg by a sniper. This happened on Wednesday, March 17, at 1:30 p.m.," she wrote.

"You may well ask if I was in the street or on the balcony. No, I was at home, on the sixth floor, in the living room, watching television. The glass door leading to the balcony was closed and the shutters were down. The bullet pierced the glass, a piece of furniture and my left leg between the heel and the knee. One of my bones was shattered."

Ghada went on to say that she lives in Ras el Nabeh, a mixed neighborhood of Moslems and Christians and one of Beirut's perpetual battle zones. Her father drove her to the hospital.

"I kept asking Daddy if I was going to die, I was bleeding so much. But he said the doctor would cure me, and he in fact bound my wound himself and gave me medicine."

Ghada, whose name means "Graceful Jasmine," said it was only the second time in her life she had been ill. "I had diabetes when I was five years old. Daddy and Mummy cried, but the doctor said insulin would save me. Over a period of five and a half years, I had 2,000 insulin injections, and, Thank God, I am still alive.

"But the sniper almost killed me yesterday.

"Since the war began, my parents have forbidden me to go up to the roof or out to the balcony because of snipers. I don't dare go down to the street to ride my bicycle because of the armed men who are always there."

Her father refuses to leave the neighborhood because the family has lived there for 25 years. Ghada herself has her own friends, Samar who lives in the same building and a girl also called Ghada who lives across the street.

"I used to go out on the balcony to chat with Ghada. Now I don't dare to because of the invisible sniper," wrote Ghada Yasmine.

"I beseech all snipers to stop their dirty work and let families live in peace inside their homes. I ask all Lebanese officials to do as we do in school. When teacher gives us a math problem, she allows us an hour or so to solve it, without leaving the classroom.

"For you, our leaders, the problem is Lebanon. You must not leave the conference room before finding a solution to this problem.

"Lebanon is like me, Ghada. It is sick and wounded. If you can't find a solution, I ask you to leave your posts and get all the doctors in Lebanon, and if necessary Syria, to find the proper medicine."

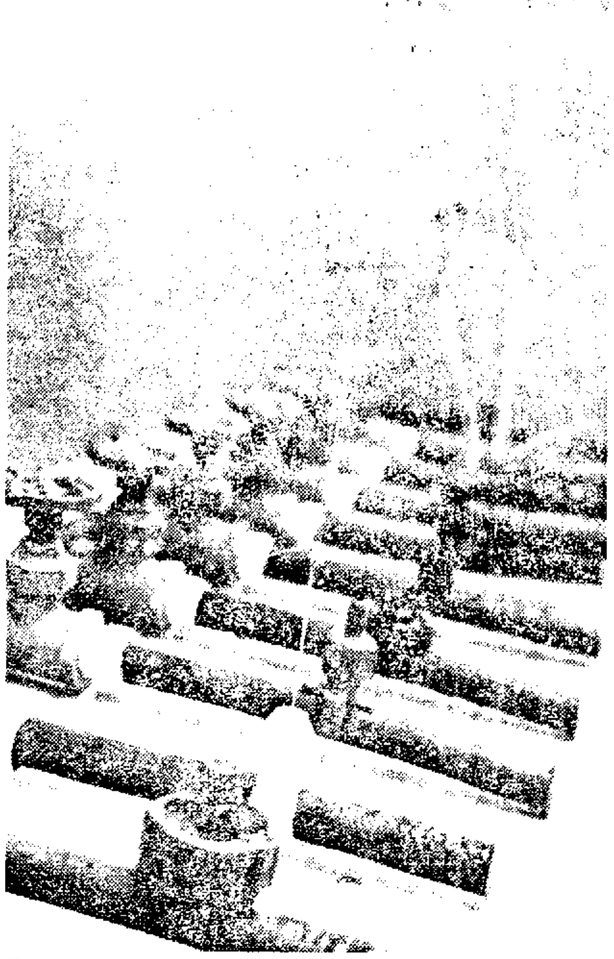
Emitters Can Cut Water Used In Garden



TINY SPRINKLER . . . has adjustable stream.

SEEN CLOSE UP . . . emitter dribbles water.

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Is the high cost of city water keeping you from having a garden? If so, you may find the answer to your problem at the Department of Agricultural Engineering, University of Nebraska Lincoln.

Dr. Dean Manbeck is tinkering with something called "drip irrigation." To be more accurate it is a lot of somethings called emitters. An emitter dribbles water onto a plant.

Properly managed, such a system can reduce the amount of water used in a garden by watering individual rows of vegetables or — if enough planning goes into the system — individual plants.

"You would avoid as much as 25% evaporation and not put water on areas that don't have a producing plant on them," Manbeck explains.

Like To Tinker?

Manbeck warns that those who would practice drip irrigation had better like to tinker a bit or they won't have the patience to produce a real saving in water.

"You might end up using more water with a poorly managed drip system than a well managed ordinary garden sprinkler," he warned.

There are dozens of types of emitters available direct from manufacturers, but apparently none on a retail basis. City water regulations often require a device in your water line that will prevent water from flowing back into the city water line as well.

Each system would have to be tailor made for an individual garden with a soaker type of emitter for rows of lettuce, radishes and beets and individual water squirters on fruit trees and tomato plants.

Dick Campbell, of Campbell's Nursery in Lincoln, uses such a system but prefers a mist in his greenhouses. "We found we had some problems with some of the individual emitters. They require a lot of attention but they do save water," he said.

Problems stem from grains of sand getting into the tiny holes that let the water out and from chemicals in hard water drying in the holes when the system is turned off.

Button Or Bladder

Some emitter designs are made with a push button to clear the obstruction, others feature a rubber bladder designed to build up pressure and force the obstruction through an expandable hole which then resumes its normal size after ridding itself of the obstruction.

The cost of such a system for a city lot size garden would probably run less than $200 if you didn't get carried away with your system design. It probably could be used for many years with some adjustments each year for changes in your garden.

Individual emitters cost from a dime to $2.50 depending on how adjustable they are; valves needed for complete control might cost around $2.00 retail per row.

Garden stores and retailers probably won't take on the task of selling the devices because of the likelihood of customer dissatisfaction. "This isn't the kind of thing you can sell off the shelf and let most people take home. It takes a person who is willing to work with it, learn how to use it and willing to check on it regularly," said Campbell.

Not For Everyone

Manbeck agreed completely. "This definitely isn't for everyone, but I do think it has an application for some people," he said.

Manbeck said he can supply a list of wholesalers to anyone interested in designing his or her own equipment.

Two seed corn companies are using the systems in experimental work with corn plots and many greenhouse operators are using the systems to grow cut flowers.

Other systems are used in orchards to cut water use in high water cost areas.

Manbeck points out that used in conjunction with a good mulch system in Lincoln it could cut water usage substantially.

"It is difficult to estimate how much water you can save because that depends on how well you manage your system and on how well it is designed, but it really works," Manbeck said.

Weekly Grain Report

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Rain and snow have dampened the upward pressure caused by stories of future Russian grain buys and the threat of drought. Neither possibility has vanished, but since they seem to have diminished a bit, prices have softened.

One area to watch closely is what happens to those thousands of wheat acres that will be torn up in the High Plains area because the crop is already lost.

This area almost certainly will be planted to sorghum as soon as the U.S. Department of Agriculture inspectors are finished with their loss calculations.

If the rains come, there could be one huge crop of grain sorghum that could be a depressing factor to add to the new meat grading regulations, which have also cut into the domestic grain market.

Fortunately, our overseas market for corn and milo (also known as grain sorghum) seems to be improving with each passing week.

If Russia does buy grain, it is more likely to be feed grain than wheat. The same is true of other eastern European countries.

Livestock numbers are increasing again in many nations as economies improve, creating a worldwide demand for meat and animal food based products.

The weather and sudden demand changes could take the grain prices at local farmer elevators sharply in either direction during the upcoming planting season. Changes at the local elevator will be smaller than the changes in the futures market.

Beautification Entries Invited

Omaha (AP) — Nebraska cities, towns and villages and neighborhood associations are invited to vie for awards in Nebraska Environmental Action Months competition.

The sponsoring Keep Nebraska Beautiful and State Department of Environmental Control said that last year 84 took part and in 1974 the total was 80.

KNB chairman Mrs. Les Anderson of Omaha asked Nebraskans to carry out clean-up, fixup projects, plant trees, recycle materials, improve landfills, develop parks, plant flowers, clean alleys, end drainage problems and do other activities which beautify communities.

To be eligible for prizes, communities must register by May 1. Most activities must be carried out in April and May. Awards will be announced at a workshop-luncheon in Lexington July 30.

Spotlight on Agriculture

By DOMINICK COSTELLO

There is no end to the people who seem willing to talk about the effect of the new meat grading system on the consumer and on the market. It doesn't really matter if they know what they are talking about or not.

Betty Furness charged on NBC's Today Show that the system was going to make cattle feeders rich. She ignored the fact that the Feeders had opposed the system. It was the American National Cattlemen's Association, a rancher group, that supported the grade change because it helped grass-fed cattle.

Cattlemen who raise the big breeds that carry little marbling supported the change.

The change has helped the man who feeds holstine cattle and the ones who sell their cattle at lighter weights. The cattleman who used to feed for prime and high choice is in big financial trouble because of the grade change.

There are several factors besides grade changes that caused the collapse of the beef market.

Cattle have been gaining weight faster than normal because of the good weather this winter.

There are more cattle on feed, which means more meat in the marketplace, which tends to reduce prices.

Holsteins which used to go into the lower grades are usually able to make choice under the new grading system, increasing the amount of meat in the choice grade.

Consumer groups that attacked the grade change are being very quiet. They were dead wrong but they won't admit it. For consumers it has meant a lot more meat at lower prices.

The grading change will hurt the cattle feeder who refuses to change his management methods. He is going to have to learn to feed to lighter weights or he will go broke.

The grading change will hurt the grain producers because it will take a lot less grain per animal.

The cattle feeders will eventually make the change. Some who fight the trend won't survive economically.

An important factor in the lower prices is the general air of uncertainty in the market. When people are fearful, they simply bid less for cattle. The same thing happened in the grain market when it had grading and quality problems.

The timing of the grading change couldn't have been worse for the feeder. We have plenty of meat, plenty of grain and we are going into the Lenten season when people eat less meat.

I have always maintained that 90% of the farmers don't understand how livestock and grain are graded. This hasn't changed my mind one bit. If they understood the new grading system, they wouldn't have been caught with heavy cattle.

☆ ☆ ☆

The Public Service Commission requirement that the National Farmers Organization get a bond — apparently — the largest bond in the state for a grain buyer — is downright funny.

Gene Potter of the NFO office in Corning, Iowa, says the oversized bond must make NFO the largest grain dealer in the state.

The fact is that almost any country elevator worth building a roof on handles more grain than the NFO indicates it handled in the last year under it's Minnesota trust.

The funding problems NFO has had with it's Iowa trust may be a factor in the decision to require the large bond.

One of the more amusing portions of the whole episode was the inspection of a Nebraska City elevator which NFO hasn't used for two years. The old Honegger elevator, at 6th and G in Lincoln, just a few blocks away from the PSC office, is being used by NFO members.

I hope the NFO gets the bond. It could restore the faith of its members in their marketing system. It could put some restraint on the careless marketing practices that got the Iowa trust in trouble.

Defector Told CIA Oswald May Have Contacted Cuban Intelligence

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Cuban defector told the Central Intelligence Agency in 1964 that Lee Harvey Oswald may have been in contact with Cuban intelligence agents seven weeks before he killed President Kennedy, newly released documents show.

The defector, described as "a well-placed individual who has been . . . in contact with . . . officers of the Cuban Directorate General of Intelligence (DGI)," also told the CIA that the DGI took extraordinary security precautions immediately after the Kennedy slaying, according to the documents.

The information was relayed to the Warren Commission which "saw no need to pursue this angle any further," a June 1964, CIA memo says. No mention of the defector or his information appears in the Warren Report, which concluded that there was no evidence of a foreign or domestic conspiracy behind the Kennedy assassination.

Memos regarding the Cuban defector were among some 1,500 pages of CIA documents released to The Associated Press. Also included is a 1975 CIA memo stating that the Warren Report should have given more credence to the possibility of a foreign conspiracy in light of promising leads that were not pursued.

The documents originally were provided to the Rockefeller Commission on the CIA and have since been turned over to the Senate intelligence committee, where a subcommittee headed by Sen. Richard S. Schweiker, R-Pa., is investigating the Kennedy assassination. Schweiker has predicted that the Warren Report will "collapse like a house of cards."

The memos regarding the Cuban defector quote him as saying "I have no personal knowledge of Lee Harvey Oswald or his activities and I do not know that Oswald was an agent . . . of the Cuban government." However, the same memos offer differing accounts of what the unnamed defector said about the possibility of a contact between Oswald and Cuban intelligence agents.

The first mention of the defector appears in a May 5, 1964, internal CIA memo in which he is quoted as saying that Oswald "was in contact" with three Cuban agents "before, during and after" his visits to the Cuban and Soviet embassies in Mexico City in late September and early October 1963. A subsequent May 8 memo quotes the source as saying that "I believe" Oswald was in contact with the Cuban agents.

When the information was forwarded to the Warren Commission on May 15, a memo said that "according to the source, Oswald may have been interviewed by Vega (one of the Cuban agents) or his assistant . . . but this is strictly conjecture on his part." A June 19 memo reporting the commission's decision not to pursue the lead any further says that the defector had "no information linking (Oswald) to the Cuban intelligence services in any manner."

The memos consistently quote the defector as saying that "after the news of the assassination of President Kennedy reached the DGI, orders were issued for all offices of the DGI . . . to sort and package all documents according to whether they were 'muy secreto' (very secret), 'secreto' (secret), or 'importante' (important). The material, once packaged, was to be held pending further instructions. All travel by DGI officers and all DGI (mail) pouches were suspended temporarily."

According to the memos, the defector did not know the reason for these security measures but believed they were taken "because of the possibility that the United States might take some type of action against Cuba and the DGI offices."

Other memos show that Cuban reaction to the Kennedy slaying was of intense interest to the CIA. All of Cuban Premier Fidel Castro's public statements were analyzed to determine if he possessed any knowledge about the killing which had not been made public.

A brief flurry of activity occurred when Castro described the telescopic sight on Oswald's rifle in slightly different terms than had been publicly reported, but the memos show that analysts concluded it did not indicate a special knowledge of the assassination.

A separate memo shows Oswald's trip to Mexico City was the most troubling part of the commission's investigation into the possibility of a foreign conspiracy. The March 1964, CIA memo says commission staff members "noted that the most significant gap appeared in the Mexican phase. For example, they had no record of Oswald's daily movements while in Mexico City nor could they confirm the date of his departure or his mode of travel."

Staff members subsequently went to Mexico City but were unable to interview the one witness who apparently had had the most extensive dealing with Oswald. The witness, a woman named Sylvia Duran who had handled Oswald's application for a visa at the Cuba embassy, was interviewed instead by Mexican authorities and an account of the interview was furnished to the commission.

Her testimony, which the Warren Report said was confirmed "by confidential sources of extremely high reliability," did not mention any contact between Oswald and Cuban agents.

In Mexico City, Oswald also visited the Soviet Embassy where, according to evidence in the Warren Report, he met with a Russian KGB agent who held a routine diplomatic job as a cover for covert activities.

A memo written last year by Raymond Rocca, who served as CIA liaison with the commission, said the Warren Report "should have left a wider 'window' for this contingency" of a foreign conspiracy. "That, indeed, was the opinion at the working level, particularly in the counterintelligence component in the CIA, in 1964." Rocca went on to say that hard evidence of a conspiracy "did (and does) not exist in Washington. But such evidence could exist in Moscow and or Havana."

According to Rocca's memo, the two most promising leads to such evidence are testimony about meetings Oswald had in 1959 with Cuban diplomatic officials and a public threat made by Fidel Castro against the lives of U.S. leaders.

The implications of the testimony about the 1959 meetings "do not appear to have been run down or developed by investigation," Rocca said.

He also pointed out that a news account of the Castro threat appeared in a New Orleans newspaper in September 1963, when Oswald was living there, but "there is no evidence in the files of the Kennedy assassination that this Castro interview was considered."

The possibility of a contact between Oswald and Cuban agents in Mexico City does not appear in the declassified version of the Rocca memo. However, large portions of the document have been deleted.

Attorney Against Transfer Of Patty For L.A. Charges

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The prosecutor who won a bank robbery conviction against Patricia Hearst said Sunday the government will surrender her to authorities in Los Angeles for arraignment on more serious charges within the week.

An attorney for the newspaper heiress said, however, he would vigorously oppose any effort to move her before her sentencing a month from now and would ask for a special court session if necessary.

U.S. Atty. James L. Browning Jr., in an impromptu news conference the day after Miss Hearst was found guilty of willingly taking part in a terrorist bank holdup, said the judge in the case had agreed to allow her transfer after interviews with probation officers are completed.

"I would assume she would be handed over by the middle of this week," he said. "She could go to Los Angeles and be returned here for sentencing April 19."

She faces state kidnaping, assault and robbery charges in Los Angeles, charges which carry a maximum sentence of life in prison. Miss Hearst already faces a maximum sentence of 35 years imprisonment for the bank robbery here.

"I'm certainly going to ask the court not to allow that to happen," defense lawyer Albert Johnson said later when told of Browning's plans. He said he would approach the judge informally Monday morning, and if rejected, would fight the movement on legal grounds.

"The grounds are that it's oppressive and harassment to move her that quickly after a trial of this magnitude," Johnson said.

He said that he and chief defense attorney F. Lee Bailey would need more time to assess the impact of Miss Hearst's conviction on the other charges pending against her. He said they could not get a "complete overview" until after her sentence.

Johnson said he visited Miss Hearst in jail Saturday night. Asked about her spirits, he said, "She's much better than we are."

Bailey said in an interview earlier in the day that he believed his 22-year-old client would remain at the San Mateo County Jail until after her sentencing.

Bailey, explaining Miss Hearst's stoic acceptance of the stunningly swift decision by the seven-women, five-man jury, said she was convinced from the start of her trial that "she didn't have much of a chance" for acquittal.

"That was how she felt when we met her so many months ago," Bailey said. "She was kind of convinced that she didn't have much of a chance. . .She continued to believe that."

Browning, who said he stopped by the courthouse to pick up some personal belongings, revealed that Miss Hearst may have a further role to play in federal proceedings against other radical figures — especially William and Emily Harris, her codefendants in the Los Angeles charges.

"I think there will be further indictments," Browning said. "An obvious possibility might be that the Harrises might be indicted in the robbery of the Hibernia Bank."

He said Miss Hearst is the only "live witness" who could link the couple to the crime for which she was convicted, placing them in cars outside the bank. If the couple is indicted, he said, Miss Hearst "quite probably" would be the star witness against them.

In addition, he said Alameda County authorities may seek indictments in connection with Miss Hearst's Feb. 4, 1974, kidnaping. No one ever has been charged in that crime, and Browning said he understood Miss Hearst "will probably testify."

The prosecutor, reviewing the points which won his case, said he had become "very enthusiastic" when he stumbled on a new piece of evidence about halfway through the trial — the tiny "olmec monkey" necklace that linked Miss Hearst romantically to a terrorist she had castigated as a rapist.

A similar trinket was found under the body of Symbionese Liberation Army "soldier" William Wolfe after a blazing shootout in Los Angeles.

HHH Has No Plans For Entering Races

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite persistent rumors that he's ready to jump into the fight for the Democratic presidential nomination, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey says he has no intention of entering any primaries.

"There's no chance I'm going to be in any of the primaries," Humphrey said in an interview in his Senate office.

At the same time, Humphrey admits he'd consider it "a challenge and an honor" to be the Democratic nominee.

"And I think I'm well equipped to take on Mr. Ford if it becomes my opportunity," added the Minnesota Democrat who was his party's nominee in 1968 and narrowly lost to Richard M. Nixon.

"And it'll be a good clean, hard-hitting campaign," said Humphrey. Then he added quickly, "I haven't any idea I'll be in the ring with him. But I want to warn any other Democrat who takes him on that he'll be no soft touch."

Three times Humphrey has sought the Democratic presidential nomination. The one time he got it, in 1968, it was after four years as Lyndon B. Johnson's vice president.

He tried the primary route in 1960 and again 1972. Both times he failed.

Humphrey's hair is grayer now; he's survived a cancer scare. But his work days are as long as ever and so are his speeches.

A request to his office for material on positions the senator has taken produced 2½ pounds of paper that recorded 40 policy statements as well as the introduction of 28 bills and 8 Senate resolutions. The subjects included the economy, crime, foreign policy, busing agriculture, defense spending, energy, transportation, health and amnesty.

Humphrey said at the start of the current presidential campaign that he'd accept the nomination but wouldn't campaign for it in the primaries.

States Battle EPA Pesticide Rules

By ERIC KRAMER
Associated Press Writer

Fourteen years after Rachel Carson wrote "Silent Spring" the U S Environmental Protection Agency is locked in a fight with state legislatures over a plan to require farmers to study the dangers of pesticides

Under the Federal Insecticide Fungicide and Rodenticide Act all applicators of restricted use pesticides, including farmers have to be certified if they wish to use the chemicals after October 1977

Some states including Nebraska have said no and the EPA says it will be illegal to use or sell the pesticides in the state unless the Legislature agrees set up a certification program for applicators

Although the EPA has not issued its list of restricted use pesticides farmers fear it will contain counter furadan dyfunate and thimet the chemicals used to protect corn from root worms Bob Roselle an entomologist for the University of Nebraska estimates the root worms could destroy 70 million bushels of Nebraska s 500 million bushel corn crop if the chemicals were not available to farmers

The lost corn could fill two hundred 200-car grain trains or feed 1 million yearling cattle to slaughter weight

Roselle said most other pests could be controlled without restricted use pesticides but farmers would have to use more expensive chemicals than they now use However he said without endrin the pale western cutworm could severely damage the wheat crop

State Sen Loran Schmit of Bellwood and the Unicameral Agriculture Committee which he chairs have voted to accept those risks rather than arequire 40 000 farmers in the state to go to pesticide school

When The Associated Press first asked the EPA how many states had taken similar action Edwin Johnson deputy administrator for pesticide programs said No one s really resisted or refused

However when an inquiry was directed through the office of Sen Carl Curtis the EPA said 15 states the District of Columbia and Guam do not have adequate legislation to regulate pesticide applicators

State Sen John DeCamp of Neligh the Ag Committee vice chairman said the EPA had told Nebraska it was one of only a very few holdouts This is blatant proof that the EPA is a lying unscrupulous dictatorial power that needs to be brought to heel

Some of the states are moving toward compliance

In Kansas both houses of the legislature have passed a bill which is expected to come out of conference committee soon

In many midwestern and western states farmers have a greater voice in the state legislature than they do in Congress When pesticide bills are referred to the legislatures agriculture committees farmers can have an overwhelming majority

The Agriculture Committee of the Colorado Senate killed its pesticide bill several weeks ago

The Texas Legislature will not meet again until 1977 so a pesticide bill cannot be considered there until next year In Wisconsin another of the states listed as having inadequate laws there was an effort this year to give farm interests more control over pesticide regulations

Other states which the EPA said did not have adequate laws include Massachusetts Rhode Island Delaware Georgia Michigan Minnesota Ohio Oklahoma Alabama Idaho and Wyoming

Congress amended the pesticide law so that farmers could sign a piece of paper saying they took a pesticide course rather than passing an examination at the end of their course of study

Schmit said the amendment could make the pesticide program more dangerous than no regulation at all because the course could make farmers overconfident in using pesticides

As a farmer I can slough off by sitting through a fourhour session sleeping if I want to and smoking a cigar and get by and I can still go out and apply restricted chemicals Schmit said at a committee hearing

Absolutely responded John Wickland an EPA pesticide administrator from Kansas City

Schmit a cattleman politician who also runs a commercial spraying service has been accused of a conflict of interest but he says commercial applicators could get more business if limitations were placed on farmers doing their own spraying

He has proposed a plan which would allow farmers to take the same course on a voluntary basis now required for commercial sprayers

The EPA has rejected the proposal At a recent committee hearing Schmit noted the ratio of environmentalists to farmers had been 4 to 1 in the audience when the committee first began to deal with the subject in 1969 He noted a shift to 50-1 against the environmentalists at the 1976 hearing

It seems to me that they have lost some of the interest they had in the environmental area he said

Inventor Is Farmer Seeking Better Way

Scottsbluff (AP) — A determination to make his own farm equipment more efficient has turned farmer Harold Heibrun into an inventor and manufacturer

Heibrun was farming near Scotts Bluff National Monument in the early 1950s when he decided there must be a better way to harvest corn than picking it and having much of it shell out on the ground

He built an attachment for a self propelled combine to pick and shell corn The implement underwent some changes and improvements before he was satisfied

He received a patent on his invention in April of 1955 and the following February went into business with John B Cook Jr They located their plant in what had been a cold storage building

Heibrun bought Cook s interest in 1962 after having built a shop on his farm where he did designing and modification

He began building land floats on wheels with a new angle design eventually a rotary cultivator and then cultivator bars which eventually changed farming practices because the bar allowed for the addition of ditchers planters and herbicide bars

The Heibruns sold their farm and moved to Scottsbluff going into business with Ray Haun and adding Farm Industrial Bearing line The addition meant service and repair for farm and industrial equipment

Heibrun Manufacturing continued to grow and in 1969 he purchased new property just for his plant But he continued to work towards improving and designing new farm equipment, testing it on a farm

His latest invention is a new bean cutter and the firm is manufacturing it He also is planning other ways in which the implement can be used

Now he has purchased another plant much larger than his former ones and is ready to undertake more new ideas to help farmers

Budget To Back Burner

Nebraskans now know what has top priority among the important bills remaining for action by the Legislature in the last eight days of this session.

Is top priority accorded the all-important operational budget bills or the state's capital construction package for the coming year?

Of course not.

First things first.

The budget bills — which had been scheduled by Speaker Jules Burbach for immediate consideration during the session's waning days — were shoved back Friday upon the mandate of an overwhelming majority of senators who recognize a comparatively narrow issue and a powerful lobby when they see them.

Upon the insistence of Sens. Loran Schmit and John DeCamp, lawmakers Friday threw out their rules, gutted LB434 (nee meatpacker payment bill) which was at second stage floor consideration, and substituted the provisions of LB703, a physicians protection bill which is the Nebraska Medical Association's answer to the malpractice problem. The malpractice issue thus jumped to the head of the class — ahead of budget considerations, political and lobbying reform and everything else.

Debate on malpractice resumes today.

Although amendments have somewhat watered down the original rigid limitations on a medical negligence victim's right to recovery, several questionable provisions still remain, including a limitation on dollar damages a victim could recover.

Lengthy debate on the NMA bill is promised, while other bills relating to the malpractice problem wait in the wings. Farther back in the wings — almost outside the stage door, apparently — are the budget bills which must pass in some form so that state government can operate and the other programs which state tax dollars support can function next year.

"I have an obligation to use whatever means are available," said Sen. Schmit in explaining his move to substitute LB703 provisions for the meatpacking bill so that malpractice could enjoy priority debating time. "It is vital we consider the malpractice issue this year."

It is also vital that the state budget and capital construction program be given a decent hearing and debate. Those bills should not take a back seat to special interest legislation, which, while important, is not the most crucial still awaiting action by the Unicameral.

Last Minute Leap

Better late than never, thinks Idaho's Sen. Frank Church, who last week took a Dagwood Bumstead leap at the Democratic presidential nomination bus and managed to land aboard at the last minute.

Church's official announcement came not from the Senate cloak room, where so many of his colleagues have announced, but from the steps of the courthouse in tiny Idaho City, the old home town of his grandfather. We like the idea of going home again to announce for the presidency, although Birch Bayh did, and look where it got him.

The strategy for Church assumes success in the late western primaries that will give him leverage at the convention in New York in August. It is admittedly a long shot proposition. Church, stumping the West the past few days, will meet his first test here in Nebraska May 11. He will be in the state this week, with several more appearances scheduled to follow — although with the Nebraska Democratic primary scene dramatically changed because the Nebraska secretary of state insists he must march in lock-step with the Oregon secretary of state, it could well be that Church and many of the Democratic candidates will curtail their schedules here.

Church may be viewed by cynics as an opportunist who would capitalize politically on chairing the Senate investigations of the CIA problems and other matters of intrigue. But we argue against that being a political plus. It was a service to the nation which instead held Church back from an active early presidential candidacy and a chance to begin the race for the nomination on an equal footing with the others.

Church's entry again gives some balance to the field of active Democratic candidates and it gives that field one more candidate of unquestioned experience and competence in foreign affairs. Church is certainly Sen. Jackson's equal in foreign affairs knowledge and experience and his approach to dealing with the world is less abrasive and more to our liking.

Church is said to be a senator of superior intellect and high moral standards; these to go along with almost 20 years of experience in the Senate at the relatively youthful age of 51.

Whether a candidate with such qualifications, who pursued and completed his responsibility to the Senate and the nation in the CIA matter before beginning his campaign can make headway in the great delegate race is an interesting question.

ON TARGET

By DON WALTON

They won't do it, of course.

But the responsible thing for the Legislature to do if it is unable to complete work on the major items on its agenda in 60 days is to extend the 1976 session.

It would take 40 votes (out of 49) to do it.

It might as well take 80.

Not in my memory (and it's getting longer than I care to admit) has a Legislature so bogged down in repetitive debate over peripheral issues, squandering its 60 legislative days in the process.

And that has happened despite the strenuous and repeated efforts of Speaker Jules Burbach to keep the legislative machine moving.

Burbach cannot be faulted, for he has led with a firm and fair hand. He saw this coming a long time ago and he warned his colleagues, but more of them were talking than listening.

The state is not going to fall apart because the Legislature fails to complete the major business on its agenda.

There are some who would say that the state actually will be better off because of it.

(Sadly, many senators say the same thing, nurturing that inferiority complex which they have almost institutionalized in the legislative branch. Then they wonder why the Legislature doesn't rate highly in some public opinion surveys.)

Obviously, there is no need for this session to act on all the bills presented to it.

But, it would seem, it ought to at least render a judgment on the priority measures — and complete its budget work.

Completing its appropriations assignment means being in session long enough to take final action, if any, on gubernatorial veto rejections or reductions.

Failing to accomplish both of those tasks would be a failure to do the job for which senators were elected.

Maybe, with some hard work and long hours in session, they can still get the job done within the 60-day limit.

☆ ☆ ☆

Last week's budget debate on the University of Nebraska was not a very instructive process for senators who do not sit on the Appropriations Committee.

They were buried in largely meaningless figures, with very little explanation of what they would purchase in terms of improvements.

With some exceptions (including Doug Bereuter's explanation of increased funding to improve undergradudate education at Lincoln), neither side did a very good job of arguing its case.

The process took part of one day and most of the next.

In the end, senators were given little to judge except a pile of figures. So many of them sat on their hands when voting decisions were made.

Fifteen didn't vote either way on instructional funding for the Lincoln campus. Sixteen sat out the vote on UNO appropriations. Fifteen rendered no judgment on the Medical Center budget. Twenty-one senators did not vote on the budget for the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

And 20 senators didn't vote either way on first-round approval for the entire higher education budget bill.

It is true that a few of those senators were absent from the legislative chamber on each of those votes — but most of them were there sitting on their hands.

My guess is that the floor discussion did not produce the kind of informed debate which many of them wanted in order to make a judgment.

DETENTE

WASHINGTON — Sometimes it is almost possible to feel sorry for Henry Kissinger. Sometimes. Almost.

Much has been made of his Boston speech charging that conservative critics of detente and liberal opponents of strong defense budgets together "will, whether they have intended it or not, end by wrecking the nation's ability to conduct a strong, reative, moderate and prudent foreign policy."

The tragedy is that he's conceivably right. Our national credibility is suffering from the desire of critics on both sides to whip-saw Kissinger and his policies. But the secretary's own deviousness is partly responsible for motivating this relentless criticism.

For example, Kissinger complains about those who exaggerate Soviet strength, those who "suddenly pretend that the Soviets are 10 feet tall." Suddenly pretend? Last month, the Central Intelligence Agency admitted discovering in late 1975 that the Soviet Union has been devoting approximately twice as much of its Gross National Product (15 to 20%) to military efforts than had been previously estimated (6 to 8%). According to the Washington Star, "people all over town are busy re-assessing." Except, apparently, the secretary of state.

Then there's mounting evidence of Russian naval superiority. In a recent interview, Captain John Moore, editor of Britain's authoritative annual "Jane's Fighting Ships," said: "I was looking at a map for 1897 when British imperialism was at its height. There were lots of black dots on it, each representing a coaling station where British navy and merchant ships could put in. Now it's the Russians who have the most marks on the map." One especially worried member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, Ohio Republican Robert A. Taft, has just called for a crash 10-year naval program premised on "the reality that America is a sea power rather than a land power," and that our security is in jeopardy.

If Secretary Kissinger had publicly recognized these problems and discussed them with any candor, he might be salvageable. But even the dollar miscalculations of detente — to say nothing of the strategic pitfalls — are coming into focus. Washington's Heritage Foundation just released a study on "The Economics of Detente," by international trade consultant Miles Costick, arguing that "the economic ramifications of detente have already cost the American consumer $3.3 billion and could cost us our survival as a nation."

A supporting introduction — labeling detente "a beguiling illusion" — was written by Dr. Ray S. Kline, former Director of Intelligence and Research, U.S. State Department.

And, of course, as a petty corollary, there's the evidence that Kissinger — who protests so mightily about some leaks — more than tolerated State Department leaks of classified material to authors of a pro-Kissinger article in "Foreign Policy" magazine.

☆ ☆ ☆

There is probably no way out. The situation seems irretrievable. Kissinger has offended the Right with one set of evasions, mistakes and misrepresentations, and the Left with another. Their criticisms are not going to stop. A new secretary of state — a man not himself a paramount symbol of deceit — could seek a moratorium on criticism. Henry Kissinger cannot.

Having correctly identified the attacks of Right and Left as a threat to American foreign policy effectiveness, the secretary of state is, of course, the one man able to furnish a necessary, beginning, partial solution: He can resign.

A Princess Has Her Problems

NEW YORK — When I was growing up, little Princess Margaret Rose was Great Britain's sequel to our Shirley Temple. Pretty, pixie-like little thing. Bit of an upstart. In austere wartime, she was the comedy relief, and while Americans had respect and admiration for her big sister, Elizabeth, it was little Margaret Rose whom they fancied more . .

As she grew to teenage, Princess Margaret, flourishing in the spotlight of world attention, became more audacious. She began to flirt, she switched from tea to champagne and scotch, went to late-night parties, and apparently became increasingly aware of her important position near the top of the royal totem pole.

She began treating some girlhood friends like ladies-in-waiting. The British press began to view her as an adolescent primar donna — but they wrote the same amused and fawning copy, glorifying "a radiant Princess Margaret," and speculating on which of several rich and titled young beaux, with or without pimples, might be her choice for a husband. Meg had graduated from Shirley Temple status to Elizabeth Taylor proportions.

In 1955, she reached the height of her power and glory in the world press when she pointed a regal finger at Capt. Peter Townsend of the Buckingham Palace equerry contingent and stated, "That's for me." Captain Townsend, slim and gaunt and (some said) awed at her decision, was a divorced man. Princess Margaret was accustomed to getting her own way, but this was not the way the Archbishop of Canterbury saw the royal family image. Divorce had never been permitted.

This was the biggest, most vital, most romantic dilemma in the British press since Margaret's Uncle Edward had renounced the throne in 1936 to marry the American divorcee named Wallis. From all over the world, thousands of reporters descended on London (myself included) to learn if loveable Princess Margaret would be permitted to wed the courageous pilot who was shot down twice during World War II. Would he now be shot down again by the Anglican Church?

☆ ☆ ☆

The suspense in the press was awesome. We reporters followed Margaret wherever she went — to Buckingham Palace, to St. Paul's Cathedral. She always was closely guarded, and never smiled. Thousands of typewriters and teletype machines clacked out stories of high drama and suspense. But in the press rooms of Fleet Street, hardened editors and reporters verbalized different stories. They spoke of that "poor devil Townsend," who hadn't asked for this high drama, and predicted that no one would be more relieved than he if the Archbishop declared the marriage impossible. The attitude was that Townsend, considerably older and more worldly than Margaret, was too fine a fellow to spend his life three paces behind a princess.

CAPT. PETER TOWNSEND and Margaret Rose . . .
The church said no to the divorced commoner . . .

When the decision came through — matrimony mission impossible — Captain Townsend quietly disappeared. No one could ever confirm whether he left England with a sigh of torture, or of relief. But when I met him a few years ago, he revealed that he had shortly thereafter married a Belgian girl and had three children — "all of whom I adore." Refusing to discuss the Princess episode, he said, "Even in this life, we have different incarnations — don't you believe that?"

In his Princess Margaret incarnation, he was "very much a public figure;" now he is "very much a private man, and loving life. We don't talk about that other period ever in public — and very rarely in private," he said with a laugh.

☆ ☆ ☆

Princess Margaret was 25 when she lost Peter Townsend. She recovered and made headlines again with this and that potential husband until she discovered Tony Armstrong-Jones, professional photographer, in 1959 and married him in a glittering ceremony the following May. They have two children, aged 14 and 12, and they also have outside interests . . . hers a younger man, his a world full of friends and photographable subjects. Separation? Divorce? Once again, Queen Elizabeth and the Church of England ponder what to do about the princess who inevitably knows her own mind, but doesn't seem sure of her heart . . .

JAMES RESTON

Jimmy Carter And The Sandwich Board

WASHINGTON — Jimmy Carter is discovering what Ed Muskie and George McGovern learned to their sorrow in the last Democratic presidential campaign: that the role of the front-runner is much tougher than the role of the challenger.

For once out front, the leading candidate is not only the visible target of all other competing forces, who want to shoot him down, but is regarded as "potential president, whose every move, action and speeches are expected to be "presidential."

Thus George Romney of Michigan lost his lead by admitting publicly that he had been "brain-washed" by the generals on Vietnam; Ted Kennedy lost the White House at Chappaquiddick; Ed Muskie lost his lead by losing his temper in the '72 New Hampshire primary, and George McGovern almost killed his chances by poor staff work on picking a running-mate and defining his welfare policy at the start of the '72 campaign.

In his struggle to the front of the Democratic pack this year, Carter has scarcely missed a step, but his first major foreign policy speech before the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations was less successful, and it illustrates one of his major problems in the last half of the primary campaign.

He offered it to a well-informed audience as an explanation of how he would approach the problems of foreign policy if he were elected president; how he saw the international situation today; what our role in the world should be; what kind of policies and policy-makers we shall need in the last years of the 1970s. In short, he invited a test of his abilities to handle the intricate subtle, and dangerous relations with other countries as president of the United States.

His Chicago speech was a very bold but disappointing exercise, for essentially it was a litany of the sins of the past, a critical and often unfair estimate of the present, and an idealistic, almost dreamy view of how to conduct foreign affairs in a world of conflicting nations and ideologies.

He proclaimed that "our foreign policy today is in greater disarray than at any time in recent history." Considering where we were with Johnson and Nixon in Vietnam, considering that the Republic is not now at war for the first time in 15 years, and that President Sadat has just kicked the Russians out of Cairo, this was at least a debatable, and maybe even a silly conclusion.

Carter was more generous to other countries than he was to our own. He was savagely critical of Henry Kissinger's "secrecy," a popular view these days, though Kissinger has made more speeches defining American policy, testified before the Congress more often, and held more news conferences with more reporters than any other secretary of state or national security official since the end of the last war.

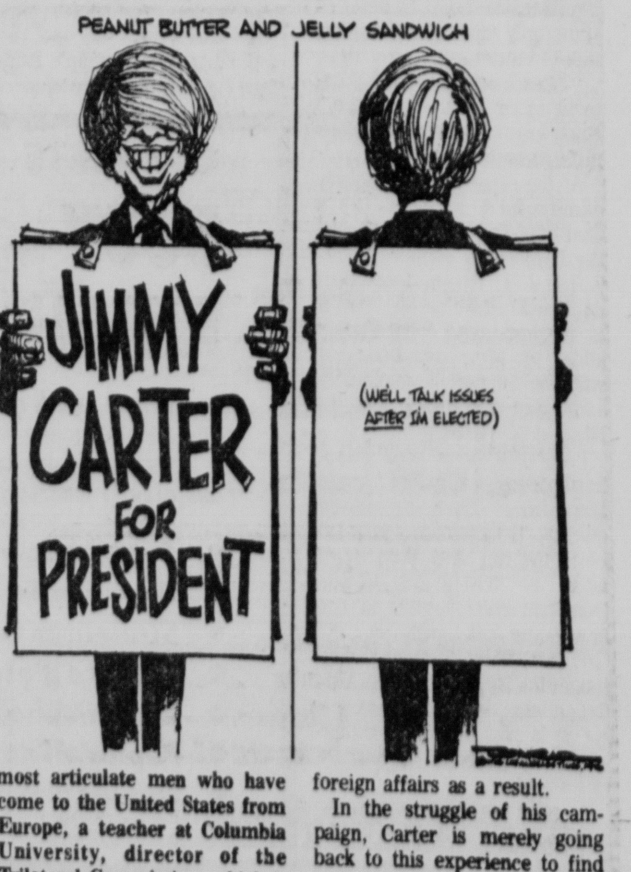
Carter's compassion for the rest of the world was admirable, but greater than his understanding of the problems that face the Washington he wants to preside over as president. "The people of other nations," he said, "have learned in recent years, that they can neither trust what our government says nor predict what it will do.

"They have been hurt and disappointed so many times that they no longer know what to believe about the United States. They want to respect us. They like our people, But our people do not seem to be running our government."

There is some truth in all this, but considering the practical world Carter wants us to deal with, not much. In Chicago, he really thought he was making a "presidential" speech, but actually he made a campaign speech, as if he were behind rather than ahead.

It was not, of course, "his" speech. He had a problem. Having got out in front in the presidential race, he was being asked to get beyond his personality and spirit, which have got him where he is, and define his foreign policy.

So between the 18-hour days, flying between Florida, New York, Washington, visiting the newspaper offices, shuttling down to North Carolina, he got somebody else to help him present his approach to the problems of the world.



PEANUT BUTTER AND JELLY SANDWICH
JIMMY CARTER FOR PRESIDENT
(WE'LL TALK ISSUES AFTER I'M ELECTED)

He was the speaker, but Zbigniew Brzezinski was the principal writer. He picked a scholar. "Zbig" is like Henry Kissinger, one of the wisest and most articulate men who have come to the United States from Europe, a teacher at Columbia University, director of the Trilateral Commission, which is doing really creative work in getting the United States, Europe and Japan together on their common world problems.

Long before Jimmy Carter became a "front-runner" in the presidential campaign, he went to the Trilateral meeting in Tokyo and elsewhere, but it would probably be wrong to assume that he is an expert on foreign affairs as a result.

In the struggle of his campaign, Carter is merely going back to this experience to find answers to those who wonder whether, as president, he could grapple with the problems of the world. His Chicago speech didn't answer the question. In fact, nobody even printed the text, which from his point of view was probably lucky. He has made great progress to the fore by being dead honest, but in Chicago he was pretending, and if he pretends, he may lose everything.

Compost Pile Contained In Bin

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

Some home gardeners do not have compost piles because they have no place to hide an unsightly but very worthwhile mess Or perhaps turning the stuff over regularly to let in air to help decomposition of the organic matter is too laborious

To make the job easier, there are compost starters layering and shredding devices, but composting still takes months until you get rich, black results to improve your soil

Now there is a Compostumbler, which serves as a containing bin easy to revolve at regular intervals

The maker relates that his device speeds the rate of decomposition to 14 days

Basically, the apparatus is a horizontal, rotating drum that retains the heat needed for decomposition, protects the compost from the weather, and makes daily turning a 60-second job

"Fly-screened vents on the sides and bottom allow air circulation through the compost to maintain bacterial activity," the company relates, "while keeping annoying pests away The corrosion-protected steel drum retains the nutrient laden liquid essence of the compost which usually leaches away in normal compost piles "

The drum holds 14 bushels It rotates on rubber rollers mounted on a tubular steel frame A crank permits easy turning to mix contents for maximum aeration and speed of decomposition – five turns a day

A removable door on the side allows easy loading unloading and inspection of contents The tight seal retains moisture in the compost eliminating need to add water except where thoroughly dry matter is used

You do not add new organic matter to working compost, since this will [illegible] then the ready time [illegible] matter is saved for the [illegible]

Golden Oldie Letter Is Good For Chuckle

DEAR READERS I am presently writing a book that will contain choice letters I've received in the last 20 years In selecting the material, I came across a letter that gave me a chuckle I hope it gives you one, too It was published in my column in October 1968

DEAR ABBY I'm a 44-year old bachelor who digs women but I'm not looking for any matrimonial involvements I live alone in a modest bungalow and enjoy my privacy

My problem is an aggressive divorcee who lives next door She's not bad looking but she comes on awfully strong She's a rip-roarin Republican and a Nixon booster from way back If she sees a light in my place she runs right over with a prepared meal and an armful of Nixon campaign literature She's even offered to cook for me and do my ironing but I'm not about to fall into that trap When she's not trying to sell me on Nixon she's talking about marriage

Last week I had it so I moved my refrigerator stove and TV down to the basement so she won't know I'm home So now she phones me What should I

NOT INTERESTED

DEAR NOT Tell her you're going to vote for Hubert and move back upstairs

DEAR ABBY PENNA READER wrote I went to a nice supper club with my lady friend and another couple when a male friend of the other couple approached me and asked if I minded if he danced with my date I said Yes I do mind and my date thought I was rude

You said You were You should have asked your date if SHE wanted to dance with the stranger

Well I think you were wrong Why should a man who goes to a supper club (and probably left his wife or girlfriend at home) expect some other guy to provide him with a girl to dance with?

I say nuts to him If he likes to dance let him bring his own date!

Opening lead — queen of clubs

This remarkable deal was [illegible] many years ago by [illegible] Sobel. She was in seven [illegible] and West led the queen [illegible] It can be seen that if [illegible] leads the A-K-Q of hearts [illegible] drawing trumps the [illegible] fails because of the 4-1 [illegible] division

[illegible] Mrs. Sobel made [illegible] slam — without [illegible] the East-West cards — [illegible] perfectly reasonable [illegible]

She won the club lead with the king, cashed the A-Q of trumps and ace of diamonds then ruffed a diamond After playing a club to the ace, she ruffed another diamond

Mrs Sobel then cashed the ace of hearts before ruffing her last club in dummy and led the four of hearts When East followed with the five, Mrs Sobel played the six When the six won, she had the rest of the tricks

Of course, anyone seeing the adverse cards would have done just as well But Mrs Sobel performed the feat without that advantage and, furthermore the accomplishment was not just a shot in the dark

On the contrary, she was 100 per cent certain the heart finesse would succeed It was a matter of simple arithmetic

Mrs Sobel realized that West had started with seven clubs since East had shown out on the second club lead. She was also aware that West had started with two trumps Furthermore she had seen West follow to three rounds of diamonds and one round of hearts

All 13 of West's cards were thus accounted for at the point when Mrs Sobel played the four of hearts from dummy Finessing the six was no hazard at all — the six was sure to win all the marbles.

Orderly Bill-Processing Possible, Mahoney Says

By United Press International

Could the Legislature devise a way to process all bills in an orderly fashion even in a 60-day session?

Sen. Eugene Mahoney said he thinks it could by adoption of one rule imposing stringent but what he considers practical limits on debate.

"What the Legislature needs is an ironclad rule that, with rare exceptions, bills and resolutions will never be debated for more than one hour on general file," he said. "Let the introducer and chief opponent each have a half hour and let them allocate the time."

General file is the first point of floor debate.

Mahoney said he would make exceptions for some pieces of legislation, citing medical malpractice as an example.

But he said it was a "disgrace" the lawmakers spent 2½ days arguing about a resolution calling on Congress to balance the budget.

"We've wasted days on debates of that kind and now we're paying for it by not having time to consider even all of the senators' priority bills," he said.

Tuesday is supposed to be the final day for debate of bills on general file. Friday afternoon, sponsors of 26 measures they consider highly important were standing by hoping their legislation somehow could be worked into the schedule during the session's waning days.

Budget Bills Next

Speaker Jules Burbach scheduled budget bills to come up immediately after disposition of Sen. Loran Schmit's malpractice proposal. After that, he said, he plans to bring up five bracketed bills, one of which is the state aid to schools measure.

Several appropriations bills are listed next on his schedule, followed by several more which he categorized as of "general interest." One of the latter is LB987, the Nebraska political accountability and disclosure act.

The school aid bill, LB631, appears to be in serious trouble.

Sales Tax Hike Looms

There are some lawmakers who figured that the $15 million increase in aid—along with some other appropriations bills still to be processed—would boost spending well past the level that would trigger an increase of the 2.5% sales tax to 3%.

Some Omaha senators tuned themselves out of the aid bill after the Legislature refused to earmark $2.5 million of the money to help the Omaha school district buy buses for desegregation.

It's also a political fact of life incumbent senators running for re-election dislike having voters identify them as supporters of bills which caused a tax increase.

Schmit Predicts OK Of Malpractice Bill

Bellwood — Members of the Legislature are not going to go home without passing some good, basic legislation on malpractice insurance, Sen. Loran Schmit predicted Sunday.

"The great majority of the members of the body proved Friday that they recognize the seriousness of the problem and want to deal with it," Schmit said. "I am sure they will stick with malpractice legislation long enough on Monday to move it on across the board. They recognize that unless we enact some kind of basic legislation this session we will be shirking our duty.

"The big winners on malpractice legislation will be the million and a half people of Nebraska, because this legislation will help insure continued high quality health care at minimum cost.

"The bill I am pushing is a compromise that gives up a lot that the doctors wanted. It is not what any one special group wanted. It is basic legislation that lays the groundwork for meeting the malpractice problem.

"Major portions of the bill are the medical review panel and the medical qualifications commission. Both will contribute to better medicine in Nebraska.

"The $500,000 limit on awards included in the bill provides a means where insurance companies can recognize the extent of their liabilities and adjust premiums fairly according to that exposure.

"We have attempted to modify sections of the bill to meet the objections of those who say it is unconstitutional.

"I am sure that passage of my bill this session does not mean that we are through with malpractice legislation in the Legislature. There will be a need for some continuing interim studies on it, and we will have to monitor the effectiveness of our legislation carefully to see how well it works.

"But my bill is a beginning and I am sure the members of the Legislature are going to meet their responsibility by passing it."

Ford Campaign Committeeman Says Callaway Should Resign

Omaha (UPI) — Howard "Bo" Callaway should resign immediately as President Ford's campaign manager to prevent investigations into his alleged misconduct from becoming a "sideshow to the main event," a Ford campaign advisory committee member said Sunday.

Richard L. "Dick" Herman of Omaha said "I'm sure that he's thinking about resigning if he already hasn't tendered his resignation."

Callaway asked that he be suspended until investigations are completed into allegations he used his influence while secretary of the Army to win favorable government treatment for a Colorado ski resort he owns and used government aircraft to fly into a nearby airport.

Herman said, "I'm not saying there's anything wrong." But apparently there's going to be an investigation of these activities on several levels. I don't think this should be the focus of a presidential campaign.

Ford Has To Be Focus

"The focus has to be on the candidate. Any external impacts have to be eliminated.

"I think Bo should resign, not because he did or didn't do a job."

However, if Callaway even remained as a suspended campaign manager, Herman said "with the investigations coming up he will become a sideshow to the main event — the campaign — and we can't have that going on in the same ring."

'I'm Sure He'll Be Helpful'

As to Callaway's future in the campaign, Herman said, "I'm sure Bo Callaway will be as helpful in all regards as he can be. But precisely what role he will play, that's something that will have to be looked at down the line."

Herman said a decision on Callaway's replacement "has to be the President's."

"Rogers Morton has indicated he would take it," Herman said. "Rog would do a good job."

Morton is now Ford's political liason aide at the White House — a position Herman said would have to be filled if "Rog decides to move over and wear the other hat."

Two Sets Needed

"The President has to have two sets of individuals, one to manage the campaign and the other in the executive branch of government to contact — somebody who knows the President's schedule, for example," Herman said, "and who has to be able to work with the President's campaign committee on activities which will assist in his nomination and election.

"And that's what Rog Morton came in to do."

Herman, a trucking executive who handled the arrangements for the controversial 1972 GOP convention, said Callaway's "goal was to hold the cost of the staff down until we actually got into the campaign effort, which he did do."

Not Everybody Happy

"Callaway made some statements which some people liked and some people didn't," Herman said. "He brought in some people and gradually got more and more into the organizational operations that are necessary to run a primary. Bo Callaway started putting it together."

Herman said he hasn't conferred with Stuart Spencer, who has temporarily replaced Callaway, but "indications are Stu doesn't want the job fulltime."

Policeman's Life 'Not So Bad' For Ex-New Yorkers In Valley

Valley (AP) — "It's not so bad," said Tony Maniaci, once a patrolman in New York City, of Valley where he and a fellow policeman found jobs when they were dismissed when the financial debacle hit.

"You can see cows from the window," he said pointing from the $180 a-month apartment he shares with former New Yorker Joe Phillipaitis. "In New York all you would see is buildings and more buildings."

But after two months on the job in this small community of 1,600, Maniaci sounded homesick.

"I miss walking along the boardwalk at Coney Island, smelling the salt air and the hot dogs. It's hard to leave New York. It's hard to leave the neighborhood you grew up in. Home is where you know every street name, where you know people."

Maniaci, 22, and Phillipaitis, 23, joined Valley's police force after reading of the vacancies in a newspaper. They had been patrolmen in the Manhattan North district until they found themselves out of jobs six months ago.

Gone are the stickups in the elevators, junkies in stairwells, rapists on rooftops, and the stench of garbage in dark hallways. Gone, too is a salary of almost $20,000. Their pay now is $8,800.

The two said they have made about 16 arrests, none of them "worth talking about."

Saturday night, when revelers spill out of Valley's five drinking spas, the two are waiting.

"Everybody is in the bars. When they leave, somebody gets loud. So you ask them to quiet down and they do," Maniaci.

The job's routine for a New Yorker has been followed by after-hours boredom, although Phillipaitis said, since the local Dairy Queen opened up "there is more to do—like a place to eat."

One Escapee From Holdrege Held In Kansas

WaKEENEY, Kan. (AP) — One of two young men who broke out of the Holdrege, Neb., jail Friday was caught Sunday in this north-central Kansas town, authorities said.

Trego County Sheriff Larry Wade said Gary Talbert, 17, of Holdrege, was taken to the Ellis County law enforcement center at Hays, Kan., then picked up by Nebraska authorities.

Wade said the second escapee, Jerry Anderson, 16, of Norton, Kan., remained at large.

Wade said the two reportedly stole a pickup truck after they escaped from the Holdrege jail, then drove in the truck to Norton, Kan. The truck wasn't recovered.

Authorities said the two apparently spent Saturday night in Dodge City, Kan., then split up.

Police said Talbert had been jailed on two counts of breaking and entering. They said Anderson had been held pending his trial on two counts of burglary.

Murder To Be Charged In Death Of Ogallalan

Ogallala (AP) — Keith County Atty. Pat Hays said Sunday he planned to file first-degree murder charges Monday against Travis Tinsley in the shooting death of Gary Olson, 28, of Ogallala.

He said assessory-after-the-fact charges will be brought against Janita R. Jones and charges of felon in possession of a firearm will be filed against Charles A. Darden. None has listed a hometown.

The three were driving a car with California license plates and had stopped at an autotruck plaza in Ogallala.

The county attorney said Olson was shot as he was getting a signature on a credit card from one of the men Friday morning. Olson was employed at the truck plaza.

Two children with the trio belonging to Mrs. Jones were taken by an Ogallala welfare officer Saturday to Mrs. Jones' parents in Detroit.

Gardening

HARVEST . . . 40 by 60 foot plot enough for family of four.

Planting Early: Good Gamble

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

Plant early and beat the neighbors!

If you're willing to gamble with spring frosts and the soil is mellow and warm in the top two inches, you can get your garden in early and reap the harvest ahead of your friends.

According to the Lancaster County Extension Office, potatoes and peas may be planted as early as March 25, while onions, lettuce, radishes, spinach and cabbage may be planted the first few days of April.

Carrots, cauliflower and beets should be planted later in April; and beans, corn, squash, tomatoes, peppers, egg plant, cucumbers and melons should wait until May.

Small amounts of radish, lettuce and spinach seed can be planted in March while two hills of tomato seed can be planted in early April.

Dr. Brent Hoadley, district Extension horticulturist for southeast Nebraska, encourages planting on high ground to provide for good water drainage.

An advocate of a garden plan or scale drawing of the garden in advance, Dr. Hoadley said a plan allows mistakes on paper so that you don't use the space for something needless.

Such a plan also enables the gardener to purchase the right amount of seeds, taking into consideration the family size and how much is to be grown for canning or freezing.

Garden rows should run north and south, according to Dr. Hoadley, and the garden should be located away from trees and shrubs in as much sun as possible.

Experts advise planting similar crops in the same area of a garden. For example, perennial crops should be planted in one area, early garden crops in another and warmer season crops in a third area.

Soil preparation is essential for a successful garden, and ideally the soil was prepared last fall for this year's garden.

However, many gardeners did not make this preparation, so Dr. Hoadley suggests working it as soon as the frost goes out of the ground.

Organic matter worked into the soil is beneficial, he said, suggesting that three or four bushes of barnyard manure be used for 100 square feet of garden.

If manure is not available, the same amount of well-rotted leaves can be substituted. A commercial fertilizer also can be used.

Other suggestions for gambling with spring frosts to beat the race with the neighbors for the first fresh garden vegetables are:

— Plant two rows of early-type sweet corn and one row of beans April 15.

— Plant small smounts of kale and chard seed in April.

— Use hot caps on cabbage, tomato, pepper and eggplants.

— Pull loose, dry dirt over emerging potato and bean plants if the weather forecast is for frost before morning.

— Sprinkle the garden with water from the hose before sunup on frosty mornings.

— Paper or cardboard is a much better cover than tin or glass to save plants from cold. Large fiber flowerpots and clay pots also do the job.

The Extension Service also strongly urges prospective gardeners to get double duty out of garden space by planting in March and April and then again in July and August for fall crops.

Succession planting of some vegetables is also encouraged so that fresh vegetables are available during the entire season.

By use of succession planting, a plot of 40 by 60 feet will provide sufficient vegetables year around for a family of four, according to County Extension Agent Emery Nelson.

Factors Can Keep Water From Washing Out Profit

Given the right soil and conditions, you may not be forced to wash down your garden savings with costly water.

Lancaster County Extension Agent Emery Nelson says he grew a tremendously good garden in Lincoln's hot, dry summer of 1975 without benefit of added water.

The secret is picking good soil that will hold moisture and produce in a dry year, he said, noting that he doesn't foresee this year being any hotter and drier than it was last year when his garden was a success.

Nelson also suggests using mulch to keep the soil cool and to prevent washing. Protection from south and southeast wind is also important, he said, noting that planting of tall crops such as corn or sunflowers on the south side or fencing in the area can help eliminate this problem.

However, if it is necessary to water for a productive garden, it is going to cut into the dollar savings realized from a successful garden.

According to Nelson, the average garden may require between 12 and 16 inches of water during the growing season. However, many factors may alter this figure — kind of soil, use of good mulch, drainage, types of plants and whether it is a normal, dry or wet season.

In an average year, it may be necessary to water only eight times — applying approximately two inches with each application, he said.

According to figures prepared by Jack Vavra, Lincoln city utilities business manager, 1,495 gallons or 1.99 HCFs (hundred cubic feet) of water are necessary to cover a 2,400 square foot garden plot with one inch of moisture.

Using an average rate figure of 37¢ per HCF, it would cost 73.7¢ to apply one inch of water to a 2,400 square foot area, Vavra said.

However, there are many variables in water rates under the present system, depending upon average usage by the customer and the purpose for which the water is used. Therefore, the 37¢ per HCF rate may not apply to every customer — some may be less, others more.

Vavra said gardening is a much more efficient use of water than lawn watering because garden soil is loose. Evaporation and runoff in lawn watering makes it much more costly to sprinkle the lawn than to water a garden of the same size.

No Seed Shortage Seen

With no nationwide threats of garden seed shortages this year, seed sales are lagging behind 1975.

Lincoln seed dealers are optimistic and anticipate a 10% increase over last year's sales in spite of slow sales to date.

Threatened seed shortages last year prompted early 1975 sales which ran anywhere from 20% to 100% over the previous year at various outlets in town.

Local dealers feel ample supply as well as instability in the weather have slowed sales this year.

Jim Kinghorn, manager of Earl May Seeds, said his store has had no difficulty getting seeds and foresees shortages in only one or two isolated varieties.

Bob Berrier of Williams Garden Center said he anticipates a pickup in sales in the next week when the weather is more stable.

The weather has definitely been a factor in the last two weeks, according to a spokesman for Campbell's Nurseries.

Sales have slowed somewhat with the drop in temperatures and snow but sales were exceptionally good in early February when the weather was unseasonably warm, she said.

Eva Statler of Statler's Garden Center said seed sales are lagging slightly from last year but attributed this to the weather.

She also reported that she had not received a group of seeds from one company, and many of her customers are waiting for the arrival of those seeds.

Neighbors Help

Princeton, N.J. (UPI) — Although community gardening is increasing on public land and institutional property, most such gardens are planted on land belonging to a neighbor or a private landowner, according to a Gallup Organization survey.

Sterilize Compost

Rochester, N.Y. (UPI) — Gardeners who use their own compost for seed starting are advised to sterilize it before sowing to prevent damping-off. A seedsman here recommends baking it until all the soil reaches 180 degrees and remains that temperature for 30 minutes. Instead of using a thermometer, he suggests burying a potato in the soil. The compost will be sterilized by the time the spud is thoroughly cooked.

Emitters Can Cut Water Used In Garden

TINY SPRINKLER . . . has adjustable stream.

By DOMINICK COSTELLO

Is the high cost of city water keeping you from having a garden? If so, you may find the answer to your problem at the Department of Agricultural Engineering, University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Dr. Dean Manbeck is tinkering with something called "drip irrigation." To be more accurate it is a lot of somethings called emitters. An emitter dribbles water onto a plant.

Properly managed, such a system can reduce the amount of water used in a garden by watering individual rows of vegetables or — if enough planning goes into the system — individual plants.

"You would avoid as much as 25% evaporation and not put water on areas that don't have a producing plant on them," Manbeck explains.

Like To Tinker?

Manbeck warns that those who would practice drip irrigation had better like to tinker a bit or they won't have the patience to produce a real saving in water.

"You might end up using more water with a poorly managed drip system than a well managed ordinary garden sprinkler," he warned.

There are dozens of types of emitters available direct from manufacturers, but apparently none on a retail basis. City water regulations often require a device in your water line that will prevent water from flowing back into the city water line as well.

Each system would have to be tailor made for an individual garden with a soaker type of emitter for rows of lettuce, radishes and beets and individual water squirters on fruit trees and tomato plants.

Dick Campbell, of Campbell's Nursery in Lincoln, uses such a system but prefers a mist in his greenhouses. "We found we had some problems with some of the individual emitters. They require a lot of attention but they do save water," he said.

Problems stem from grains of sand getting into the tiny holes that let the water out and from chemicals in hard water drying in the holes when the system is turned off.

Button Or Bladder

Some emitter designs are made with a push button to clear the obstruction, others feature a rubber bladder designed to build up pressure and force the obstruction through an expandable hole which then resumes its normal size after ridding itself of the obstruction.

The cost of such a system for a city lot size garden would probably run less than $200 if you didn't get carried away with your system design. It probably could be used for many years with some adjustments each year for changes in your garden.

Individual emitters cost from a dime to $2.50 depending on how adjustable they are; valves needed for complete control might cost around $2.00 retail per row.

Garden stores and retailers probably won't take on the task of selling the devices because of the likelihood of customer dissatisfaction. "This isn't the kind of thing you can sell off the shelf and let most people take home. It takes a person who is willing to work with it, learn how to use it and willing to check on it regularly," said Campbell.

Not For Everyone

Manbeck agreed completely. "This definitely isn't for everyone, but I do think it has an application for some people," he said.

Manbeck said he can supply a list of wholesalers to anyone interested in designing his or her own equipment.

Two seed corn companies are using the systems in experimental work with corn plots and many greenhouse operators are using the systems to grow cut flowers.

Other systems are used in orchards to cut water use in high water cost areas.

Manbeck points out that used in conjunction with a good mulch system in Lincoln it could cut water usage substantially.

"It is difficult to estimate how much water you can save because that depends on how well you manage your system and on how well it is designed, but it really works," Manbeck said.

Weekly Grain Report

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Rain and snow have dampened the upward pressure caused by stories of future Russian grain buys and the threat of drought. Neither possibility has vanished, but since they seem to have diminished a bit, prices have softened.

One area to watch closely is what happens to those thousands of wheat acres that will be torn up in the High Plains area because the crop is already lost.

This area almost certainly will be planted to sorghum as soon as the U.S. Department of Agriculture inspectors are finished with their loss calculations.

If the rains come, there could be one huge crop of grain sorghum that could be a depressing factor to add to the new meat grading regulations, which have also cut into the domestic grain market.

Fortunately, our overseas market for corn and milo (also known as grain sorghum) seems to be improving with each passing week.

If Russia does buy grain, it is more likely to be feed grain than wheat. The same is true of other eastern European countries.

Livestock numbers are increasing again in many nations as economies improve, creating a worldwide demand for meat and animal food based products.

The weather and sudden demand changes could take the grain prices at local farmer elevators sharply in either direction during the upcoming planting season. Changes at the local elevator will be smaller than the changes in the futures market.

Beef Revue Set April 17

The 14th annual Blue Valley Beef Revue will be held in Fairbury April 17, at the Jefferson County Fairgrounds.

There will be a judging contest for 4-H and FFA youth and a $100 scholarship will be awarded by Henry Evers of Odell to the top youth judge.

The beef show is open to any purebred breeders of Herefords, Black Angus, Shorthorn, and Charolais cattle.

Judging Contest Set March 29

Central Nebraska 4-H club members will have an opportunity to learn more about beef judging at the annual Heart of Nebraska 4-H Judging Contest at the Dawson County Fairgrounds in Lexington March 29, starting at 1:30 p.m.

Harold Stevens, Dawson County Extension agent, says the 4-H'ers will judge four classes of Herefords with trophies and ribbons going to both individuals and teams in 4-H junior and 4-H senior division.

On March 30, the official placings will be made on the sale bulls.

Beautification Entries Invited

Omaha (AP) — Nebraska cities, towns and villages and neighborhood associations are invited to vie for awards in Nebraska Environmental Action Months competition.

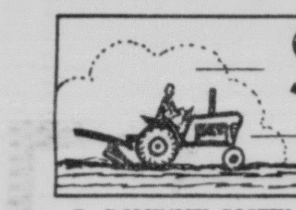
The sponsoring Keep Nebraska Beautiful and State Department of Environmental Control said that last year 84 took part and in 1974 the total was 80.

KNB chairman Mrs. Les Anderson of Omaha asked Nebraskans to carry out clean-up, fixup projects, plant trees, recycle materials, improve landfills, develop parks, plant flowers, clean alleys, end drainage problems and do other activities which beautify communities.

To be eligible for prizes, communities must register by May 1. Most activities must be carried out in April and May. Awards will be announced at a workshop-luncheon in Lexington July 30.

$10 Grows Into $250

Shelburne, Vt. (UPI) — Gardening experts here estimate that $10 worth of seeds will produce $250 worth of fresh vegetables in a home garden.



Spotlight on Agriculture

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

There is no end to the people who seem willing to talk about the effect of the new meat grading system on the consumer and on the market. It doesn't really matter if they know what they are talking about or not.

Betty Furness charged on NBC's Today Show that the system was going to make cattle feeders rich. She ignored the fact that the Feeders had opposed the system. It was the American National Cattlemen's Association, a rancher group, that supported the grade change because it helped grass-fed cattle.

Cattlemen who raise the big breeds that carry little marbling supported the change.

The change has helped the man who feeds holstine cattle and the ones who sell their cattle at lighter weights. The cattleman who used to feed for prime and high choice is in big financial trouble because of the grade change.

There are several factors besides grade changes that caused the collapse of the beef market.

Cattle have been gaining weight faster than normal because of the good weather this winter.

There are more cattle on feed, which means more meat in the marketplace, which tends to reduce prices.

Holsteins which used to go into the lower grades are usually able to make choice under the new grading system, increasing the amount of meat in the choice grade.

Consumer groups that attacked the grade change are being very quiet. They were dead wrong but they won't admit it. For consumers it has meant a lot more meat at lower prices.

The grading change will hurt the cattle feeder who refuses to change his management methods. He is going to have to learn to feed to lighter weights or he will go broke.

The grading change will hurt the grain producers because it will take a lot less grain per animal.

The cattle feeders will eventually make the change. Some who fight the trend won't survive economically.

An important factor in the lower prices is the general air of uncertainty in the market. When people are fearful, they simply bid less for cattle. The same thing happened in the grain market when it had grading and quality problems.

The timing of the grading change couldn't have been worse for the feeder. We have plenty of meat, plenty of grain and we are going into the Lenten season when people eat less meat.

I have always maintained that 90% of the farmers don't understand how livestock and grain are graded. This hasn't changed my mind one bit. If they understood the new grading system, they wouldn't have been caught with heavy cattle.

☆ ☆ ☆

The Public Service Commission requirement that the National Farmers Organization get a bond — apparently — the largest bond in the state for a grain buyer — is downright funny.

Gene Potter of the NFO office in Corning, Iowa, says the oversized bond must make NFO the largest grain dealer in the state.

The fact is that almost any country elevator worth building a roof on handles more grain than the NFO indicates it handled in the last year under it's Minnesota trust.

The funding problems NFO has had with it's Iowa trust may be a factor in the decision to require the large bond.

One of the more amusing portions of the whole episode was the inspection of a Nebraska City elevator which NFO hasn't used for two years. The old Honegger elevator, at 6th and G in Lincoln, just a few blocks away from the PSC office, is being used by NFO members.

I hope the NFO gets the bond. It could restore the faith of its members in their marketing system. It could put some restraint on the careless marketing practices that got the Iowa trust in trouble.

Poll Shows:

People Losing Confidence In Major U.S. Institutions

By LOUIS HARRIS

Louis Harris

Congress At Bottom

Public confidence in major U.S. institutions is at its lowest point since the Harris Survey began making such measurements 10 years ago.

At the bottom of the list is Congress, with only nine per cent of the American people expressing a great deal of confidence in congressmen. Only a bit higher is the executive branch of the federal government, with a confidence rating of 11%.

But the private sector does not fare much better, as a Harris Survey of 1.512 adults taken at the beginning of March shows:

—Great confidence in the people running major companies has plummeted to 16%, down from 19% last year and from a high of 55% 10 years ago.

—Doctors get a 42% rating, down from 73% in 1966.

—Leaders of higher education have dropped to 31% on the confidence scale. They rated 61% a decade ago.

—People running organized religion are at a 10-year low with a 24% rating, down from a high of 41%.

—Military leaders stir great confidence in 23% of the public, a sharp fall-off from 62% in 1966.

—Confidence in the media has also tailed off after three years of rising ratings. The press now receives a 20% mark, compared to 26% a year ago and 30% in 1973. The all-time low for the press was recorded back in 1971 at 18%.

The people running television news inspire a great deal of confidence in 28% of the public, down from 35% a year ago and from an even higher 41% back in 1973, when the Watergate hearings were carried on TV.

Although confidence has declined in both private and public institutions, the status of government seems to have suffered the most. This has a particular significance in view of the upcoming presidential election. The inability of political leaders to inspire confidence is the key reason why turnout at the polls has been declining in recent years.

In another question, the public was asked how it felt about the trend in leadership "both inside and outside of government" compared to 10 years ago. A substantial 55% of the people answered that the caliber of leadership had grown "worse," 9% said "better" and 31% thought it had remained "about the same." Associated with this decline in confidence is the finding that a plurality of 45% believe that the quality of life in the country has "grown worse" over the past decade, compared to 31% who feel it has "improved."

A high 67% of the people say that "the trouble with most leaders is that they don't understand people want better quality of almost everything they have rather than more quantity."

These findings show that there is a relationship between the public's confidence in national leadership and its feelings about the quality of life. It would seem that unless the leadership of the country, in and out of government, begins to show that it is capable of improving the quality of life, it is going to be in deep trouble with the public.

Healey Enters Cabinet Contest

London (AP) — Britain's Chancellor of the Exchequer, Denis Healy, entered the Labor party leadership struggle. He became the sixth cabinet minister seeking to replace Prime Minister Harold Wilson, who is to resign.

Healey's entry into the leadership stakes to determine the man almost certain to become the next prime minister threw the contest wide open.

The leader will be chosen by 317 Labor party Members of Parliament with the winner needing a clear majority of 159 votes. The results of the first ballot will be known next Thursday, but it could go to two or three ballots stretching to Apri 5.

Airline Expanding

New York (UPI) — Air Canada, which already operates from 10 cities in the United States, is expanding services this year in connection with the most comprehensive Canadian tour program ever offered by the airlines. New operations will include a nonstop service from Boston to Toronto, Chicago to Calgary, Cleveland to Montreal, and Portland, Maine, to Montreal.

1. 25.000 homes in Lincoln have substandard insulation?
2. If these 25.000 homes were insulated properly, it would result in a 30% savings in energy required for heating and a 20% savings in energy required for summer cooling?
3. Electricity saved from those 25.000 homes during one summer could run the city's street lights for one year?
4. Adequate insulation can be written off in about three years from the savings realized in heating and air conditioning costs?

Those are the facts. Your Lincoln Electric System is vitally concerned with energy savings, and you are vitally interested in "shaving" your utility bills. Proper insulation is one way. There are many others. If you'd like to know more of these, drop in at your Lincoln Electric System's Business Office and ask for "Energy Conserving Hints".

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplane

Disneyland — In 1960 the State Department told Nikita Khrushchev, then in Los Angeles, that he could not visit Disneyland. Not that they were afraid the rugged Russian would cop a Mickey Mouse pin.

No, they were afraid of his "security." God knows what assassins lay in wait among the crashing teacup ride in Alice in Wonderland's mad tea party. It was a grave mistake — the kind made by diplomats who keep out of trouble by keeping out of everything.

Khrushchev made off for home announcing he would top Disneyland by building a "Miracleland" in Moscow. Who knows what detente was lost by denying the premier the jolting thrill of Mr. Toad's Wild Rice.

We came down to see how Disneyland is doing after all this time. Bringing my 12-year-old boy and a pal just to keep things in perspective.

I first came to Disneyland 20 years ago. Walt Disney's magic land had been open two years. Already the bankers who had denied him loans were eager to lay on anything he wanted for expansion.

Disney himself was unable to explain the success: "I just spread a little pollen here and a little pollen there," he told us.

At that time we came into the Disneyland Hotel by helicopter. On a clear day you could see a lot of orange trees in Orange County.

There were only five hotels — there are 125 now. The orange trees we saw from the 11th floor have disappeared under the concrete of Disneyland's parking lot that holds 11,500 cars.

Each year 10 million people come to Disneyland. It is the greatest tourist attraction in California. Quite likely the greatest in America.

☆ ☆ ☆

While the oranges were squeezed out, by-product parks sprang up. The best known is Knott's Berry Farm — neither a farm nor does it have berries.

There's a Movieland Wax Museum. A Lion Country Safari. Auto museums and airplane museums and a Japanese Village.

They are slick. They make money. And they make the genius of Disney stand out like the lily among field daisies.

Disney was living gloriously as the fantasies were wired, computerized, made to move and amaze everybody. The first heads of state were arriving at Disneyland Hotel for royal tours.

Richard Nixon was vice president. (Khrushchev was glad to have Dick Nixon to kick around which he did with gusto in "the kitchen debate" in Moscow. (A debate about like Muhammad Ali's recent five-round debate with the Belgian 'unloaded' bombshell.)

Disney scouts scoured the world for rare plants: For real jungle growth in the Jungle River Ride. For pine trees that would cooperate with Disney and grow only one inch a year.

We couldn't say enough about Disneyland. My clips show I got caught in those terrible statistics we fall into when words fail us. "Empty-ump acres tended by empty-ump employes."

It was a familiar place I came back to. The pirates of the Caribbean are as ferocious as ever. The monorail slides smoothly from Tomorrowland back to today at the Disneyland Hotel station.

States Battle EPA Pesticide Rules

By ERIC KRAMER
Associated Press Writer

Fourteen years after Rachel Carson wrote "Silent Spring" the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency is locked in a fight with state legislatures over a plan to require farmers to study the dangers of pesticides.

Under the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act, all applicators of "restricted use" pesticides, including farmers, have to be certified if they wish to use the chemicals after October 1977.

Some states, including Nebraska, have said "no" and the EPA says it will be illegal to use or sell the pesticides in the state unless the Legislature agrees set up a certification program for applicators.

Although the EPA has not issued its list of restricted use pesticides, farmers fear it will contain counter, furadan, dyfunate and thimet, the chemicals used to protect corn from root worms. Bob Roselle, an entomologist for the University of Nebraska, estimates the root worms could destroy 70 million bushels of Nebraska's 500 million bushel corn crop if the chemicals were not available to farmers.

The lost corn could fill two hundred 200-car grain trains or feed 1 million yearling cattle to slaughter weight.

Roselle said most other pests could be controlled without restricted use pesticides but farmers would have to use more expensive chemicals than they now use. However, he said, without endrin, the pale western cutworm could severely damage the wheat crop.

State Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood, and the Unicameral Agriculture Committee which he chairs have voted to accept those risks rather than arequire 40,000 farmers in the state to go to pesticide school.

When The Associated Press first asked the EPA how many states had taken similar action, Edwin Johnson, deputy administrator for pesticide programs, said, "No one's really resisted or refused."

However, when an inquiry was directed through the office of Sen. Carl Curtis, the EPA said 15 states, the District of Columbia and Guam do not have adequate legislation to regulate pesticide applicators.

State Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh, the Ag Committee vice chairman, said the EPA had told Nebraska it was one of only a very few holdouts. "This is blatant proof that the EPA is a lying, unscrupulous, dictatorial power that needs to be brought to heel."

Some of the states are moving toward compliance.

In Kansas, both houses of the legislature have passed a bill which is expected to come out of conference committee soon.

In many midwestern and western states, farmers have a greater voice in the state legislature than they do in Congress. When pesticide bills are referred to the legislatures' agriculture committees, farmers can have an overwhelming majority.

The Agriculture Committee of the Colorado Senate killed its pesticide bill several weeks ago.

The Texas Legislature will not meet again until 1977 so a pesticide bill cannot be considered there until next year. In Wisconsin, another of the states listed as having inadequate laws, there was an effort this year to give farm interests more control over pesticide regulations.

Other states which the EPA said did not have adequate laws include Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Delaware, Georgia, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Alabama, Idaho and Wyoming.

Congress amended the pesticide law so that farmers could sign a piece of paper saying they took a pesticide course rather than passing an examination at the end of their course of study.

Schmit said the amendment could make the pesticide program more dangerous than no regulation at all because the course could make farmers overconfident in using pesticides.

"As a farmer, I can slough off by sitting through a fourhour session, sleeping if I want to, and smoking a cigar, and get by and I can still go out and apply restricted chemicals," Schmit said at a committee hearing.

"Absolutely," responded John Wickland, an EPA pesticide administrator from Kansas City.

Schmit, a cattleman-politician who also runs a commercial spraying service, has been accused of a conflict of interest but he says commercial applicators could get more business if limitations were placed on farmers doing their own spraying.

He has proposed a plan which would allow farmers to take the same course on a voluntary basis now required for commercial sprayers.

The EPA has rejected the proposal. At a recent committee hearing, Schmit noted the ratio of environmentalists to farmers had been 4 to 1 in the audience when the committee first began to deal with the subject in 1969. He noted a shift to 50-1 against the environmentalists at the 1976 hearing.

"It seems to me that they have lost some of the interest they had in the environmental area," he said.

Inventor Is Farmer Seeking Better Way

Scottsbluff (AP) — A determination to make his own farm equipment more efficient has turned farmer Harold Heibrun into an inventor and manufacturer.

Heibrun was farming near Scotts Bluff National Monument in the early 1950s when he decided there must be a better way to harvest corn than picking it and having much of it shell out on the ground.

He built an attachment for a self-propelled combine to pick and shell corn. The implement underwent some changes and improvements before he was satisfied.

He received a patent on his invention in April of 1955 and the following February went into business with John B. Cook Jr. They located their plant in what had been a cold storage building.

Heibrun bought Cook's interest in 1962, after having built a shop on his farm where he did designing and modification.

He began building land floats on wheels with a new angle design, eventually a rotary cultivator, and then cultivator bars which eventually changed farming practices because the bar allowed for the addition of ditchers, planters and herbicide bars.

The Heibruns sold their farm and moved to Scottsbluff, going into business with Ray Haun and adding Farm Industrial Bearing line. The addition meant service and repair for farm and industrial equipment.

Heibrun Manufacturing continued to grow and in 1969 he purchased new property just for his plant. But he continued to work towards improving and designing new farm equipment, testing it on a farm.

His latest invention is a new bean cutter and the firm is manufacturing it. He also is planning other ways in which the implement can be used.

Now he has purchased another plant, much larger than his former ones, and is ready to undertake more new ideas to help farmers.

In Simants Murder Case:
Town Grapevine Spread News Reporters Were Barred From Printing

(EDITOR'S NOTE): This is the second of three articles telling how a lurid Nebraska case has brought to the surface a basic question of Constitutional law. Fred W. Friendly is a professor of journalism at Columbia University.)

By FRED W. FRIENDLY

Sutherland (Neb.) is a bleak, prairie village that vibrates when the long Union Pacific freight trains thunder through. Its people — ranchers and railroad workers, now swollen with construction crews building a state power plant — view North Platte with the suspicion that North Platte views Omaha and Omaha views New York.

In North Platte and Sutherland, gun control laws are fighting words; they are seldom even discussed in a community where virtually every home has a gun, and many have prized collections of rifles and pistols.

So it was not unusual that Erwin Charles Simants, an unemployed handyman and fence builder with an I.Q. of 75, should have access to the .22 caliber rifle in the home of his brother-in-law, William Boggs.

On the evening of October 18, Simants, who is often called "Herbie" by members of his family, borrowed the rifle, crossed the narrow yard to the house of James Henry Kellie, where he found 10-year-old Florence Kellie. He raped her and killed her; powder burns on her forehead indicated she had been shot at point-blank range. Other members of the Kellie family, who were not in the house, came inside and were murdered as the frightened Simants attempted to eliminate all witnesses. They included James Henry, 66; Audrey Marie, 57; Deanne, 7; Daniel, 5; and David, 3.

Hardened Investigators Shocked

Even hardened state police investigators were shocked by the fury of the massacre and the strong implication, later documented in part of Simant's statement, that there had been sexual assaults even after death.

After the shootings, Simants returned the rifle to his sister's home, and told his 13-year-old nephew, Butch Boggs, "I've just killed the Kellies." At Simants's request, Butch called the home of the elder Simants, Amos and Grace. Simants told his mother about the murders and said, "I'm coming home." His father, a railroad worker, told Herbie that he didn't believe the story, but he was going over to the Kellies' to see for himself.

When Amos Simants opened the door of the Kellie residence, he was sickened by the sight and scent. Shaken, he returned home and told his wife to call the ambulance and the police. He also told his son to turn himself in.

Simants instead stopped by the Rodeo Bar, across from the Union Pacific railroad tracks, and had a beer. Then he walked west to the Longhorn Bar, drank one more beer and fled into the high weeds behind the Kellie and Boggs houses, where he hid through the night. Shortly before 8 a.m., Sunday, he walked to the back door of the Boggs house and was immediately arrested by a state police officer and Sheriff Gilster.

Whatever transpired in the deepest, darkest, most twisted part of this man's mind, to paraphrase Simants' defense lawyer, may never be known, but much of what happened in the Kellie house that night was known within hours by the Sutherland community.

The news spread by the kind of grapevine that exists in a town this size by a communication network unique to this one. The attendant on duty at "The Light Plant," the office of the local power plant which doubles as a 24-hour-a-day message center for fire, police, and other information, was dispensing a chatter of fact, hearsay and short-wave jargon coming in from ambulance attendants, deputy sheriffs and town officials.

But the reporters and cameramen, pouring in from all points in western Nebraska, and by chartered planes from Omaha, Lincoln and Denver, found it difficult to obtain any official information from the county prosecutors in charge of the case. Pressured by their night editors for more facts, they confronted law officers whose emotions were already charged by the night's gruesome events and the continuing search for the murderer.

The deputy county attorney, Marvin Holscher, a tough prosecutor with a record of many convictions and numerous tiffs with the Nebraska media, established a hedge in front of the Kellie residence as a sort of imaginary police line.

"Goddammit, I'm not going to try this case on the lawn of this house, or in the media," he yelled. A reporter from The Omaha World Herald, according to Holscher, shouted back, "You're not telling us what happened. I'm going to make you look like an ass." (The reporter, Frank Santiago, remembers it differently: "You're going to make an ass of yourself, Holscher.") The chief prosecutor, Milton Larson, recalls shouting, "There's a TV helicopter overhead, and we haven't even gotten the six bodies out."

Not Good Atmosphere For 'Guidelines'

It was hardly an atmosphere to nurture the spirit of the Nebraska bar-press voluntary guidelines for pretrial reporting, and over the course of the next several days, it appeared that the guidelines were all but forgotten by journalists as well as lawmen.

At 1:43 P.M. the Associated Press was finally able to transmit a story with the names of the victims, and that a neighbor of the Kellies was being sought. Sheriff "Hop" Gilster, so excited that he had suffered a slight heart attack, revealed to some reporters that the murder weapon, a .22 caliber rifle, was in police custody and that Simants had told his father about the murders that had transpired in the Kellie house. With little attention to guidelines, the A.P. carried a bulletin at 6:27 a.m. reporting his statements.

By 9 that morning, Simants had been booked, stripped of his clothing and boots, which would be used as evidence, had listened three times to the "Miranda card," warning that statements he might make could be used against him. Now he was making a confession.

This confession was not officially reported to the media, but 30 minutes before Simants's confession to the officers, prosecutor Larson was quoted by the A.P. as saying, "Simants apparently walked to his father's home after the shooting and told his father he was responsible for the deaths." However, the A.P. now says it erred in quoting Larson. Ed Nichols, A.P. bureau chief in Omaha, admits hearsay of the ambulance driver's husband was falsely attributed to Larson.

Sheriff Holds News Conference

Later that Sunday morning, Sheriff Gilster held a news conference, attended by both print and broadcast media, at which he went far beyond the guidelines that preclude "opinions concerning the guilt, the innocence or the character of the accused."

Reporter: It didn't surprise you (when the woman called the fire station to say Simants was out in the back yard.)

Sheriff: It didn't surprise me.

Reporter: Why didn't it surprise you?

Sheriff: Well, a lot of times they say they return to the scene . . .

Reporter: You mean . . . after he shot those people, he went in and got a drink in a bar?

Sheriff: Yes.

Reporter: Why did he kill those people?

Sheriff: I can't say at this time.

Radio stations and the A.P. and United Press International reported Sheriff Gilster's revelations Sunday afternoon and evening in considerable detail. However, what seemed most irresponsible to the judges and the lawyers in the proceeding was a television report received by Channel 2, KNOP, from the NBC network; it was aired on the news that night and on the "Today" show the following morning.

Jim Lee, a reporter for NBC affiliate KOA-TV in Denver, had flown in by chartered helicopter the night of the crime and flown back to Denver on Sunday after the sheriff's news conference. He told his audience that "Simants reportedly confessed to his father and then fled." The statement was fed in to North Platte via New York by a Denver-based newsman who had never heard of any Nebraska guidelines.

Confession Omitted

The following day, Monday, The Omaha World-Herald, circulation 238,000 and the dominant newspaper in the state, omitted any reference to Amos Simants's statement about his son's confession and did not report any of the sheriff's incriminating remarks implying that Simants had returned to the scene of the crime. However, the lead of a page-one story in The World-Herald's Monday edition read like something out of "The Front Page": "He was called a hot head, a loner, a drinker by those who knew him, but Erwin Charles Simants, suspected of killing six here Saturday night, remains an enigma to many."

The Monday edition of The North Platte Telegraph, circulation 17,000, devoted all but four inches of its front page to the mass murder, including a report that "the elder Simants tearfully said, "My son killed five or six people here.

Enter now two judges. Judge Hugh Stuart is an experienced and respected district court judge with a reputation for running a disciplined courtroom. Judge Ronald Ruff, 34, is an unassuming Lincoln County Judge used to sitting on trials involving misdemeanors such as speeding violations and petty larceny. There is little love lost between them. Judge Stuart, says Judge Ruff, "once accused me of being the most immature and incompetent judge he had ever met."

Although the trial would be held in Judge Stuart's court, Judge Ruff would preside over the preliminary hearing required to establish that cause existed to hold Simants for trial. Judge Ruff dreaded the inflammatory aspects of the sordid Simants case, the probability that his nemesis, Judge Stuart, would preside at the trial, and the possibility of reversal. "I kept thinking of Sheppard vs. Maxwell . . . I didn't care what was in the paper; I just didn't want to be reversed," he says.

Judge Stuart Consulted

So Judge Ruff consulted Judge Stuart about the possibility of closing the hearing to the public and restricting press coverage so that the details of rape and necrophilia wouldn't be reported and broadcast over and over again before jury selection. Stuart advised Ruff that it was against Nebraska statutes to close the hearing and recalls telling him, "You can't restrain the media," and that he would be "opening a can of worms" with a restraining order. (Ruff claims that Stuart was vague and noncommittal about a restraining order.)

Meanwhile, prosecutor Larson was on the telephone consulting Nebraska Attorney General Paul Douglas, in Lincoln. A dynamic former district attorney who aspires to be Nebraska's senator, Douglas, according to Larson, told him, "Don't do it. Don't ask the court to put that restraining order on."

In spite of such admonitions, the prosecution and the county defender both moved that the news media be gagged, and the county defender also asked that the preliminary hearing be closed. Judge Ruff refused to close that procedure, but directed that there could be no reporting of any testimony or evidence produced at the hearing.

"When these two constitutional provisions come into conflict . . . the right of the free press must be subservient to the right of the accused to have due process," he declared. He cited the Supreme Court in Sheppard vs. Maxwell: "If publicity during the proceedings threatens the fairness of a jury trial, a new trial should be ordered."

Many lawyers believe that the High Court was referring to trials, not preliminary hearings and that the retrial ordered in Sheppard was intended to suggest alternate remedies open to judges other than press gags. However Ruff read it as authority for restraining orders and proclaimed, "This judge is not going to abdicate his duty." Though he previously had known little of the Nebraska Bar-Press Guidelines, Judge Ruff further ordered that they be mandatory.

Ironically, Judge Ruff never believed for a moment that his restraining order would be obeyed. "Me, gag the powerful Omaha World-Herald and The Lincoln Journal and The Chicago Tribune?" And many in and out of Nebraska news and bar circles ask why the gag order, considered unconstitutional by many authorities, was not defied. Executives at The Omaha World-Herald, The Lincoln Star and The North Platte Telegraph, conservative in nature, say they do not believe in civil disobedience and decided to fight it out in court.

But before they could do that, the preliminary hearing went on, with reporters barred from revealing any of the evidence or testimony produced, even though the courtroom was open to the public.

Those who attended got their money's worth. The purpose of the hearing was to prove that a crime was committed and that there was probable cause to believe the suspect had committed it. In Simants's case these facts could have been amply demonstrated in general terms, yet his preliminary hearing took up almost a full day of court and included the testimony of nine witnesses who spelled out many of the gruesome details of child molestations and other horrors.

Judge Ruff apparently permitted this anomalous situation — inadvertently leaving sensational tidbits of information for the local rumor mills while professional communications outlets remained gagged — because he was apprehensive about cutting off whatever record the prosecution wished to establish. Yet had he chosen to limit the testimony, he could have had an adequate preliminary hearing without having to restrain the press.

Order Obeyed But Appealed

The local press continued to obey the gag, but spokesmen for the Nebraska news organization appealed Judge Ruff's order to Judge Stuart. Judge Stuart now faced the task of reviewing a decision he had cautioned against. "I found myself with the major decision of my career and we just backed into it."

After a hearing on October 23, he decided to terminate Judge Ruff's order and initiate his own more carefully drawn restraining order. He prohibited the press from publishing any confession or admission of guilt of Simants, the results of the pathologist's report, the identity of the victims who had been sexually assaulted and the description of those crimes. He agreed with Ruff that the Nebraska Bar-Press Guidelines should be mandatory. He also prohibited the press from reporting some specifics of the gag order.

The Judge is painfully aware that this decision to continue the gag was inconsistent with his earlier advice. "I just want those nine Justices to understand the position I was in," he later said. Stuart feared that he could not lift Judge Ruff's gag without exposing himself to the threat of reversal and the thought of having the community buzzing about the necrophilia (defined as "an abnormal, often erotic attraction to dead bodies") haunted him.

In addition, Judge Stuart was offended by the remarks of an attorney for the Nebraska media who lectured the court: "Goodness gracious, we want this man to have a fair trial, but I'd let somebody go free who was guilty before I'd deny freedom of speech."

7 Israelis Held In Fire Probe

NETANYA, Israel (AP) — Police detained seven Israelis Sunday on suspicion of arson in connection with a hotel fire that killed four persons and injured 46, including six tourists from Miami Beach, Fla.

The state radio said some of the detainees were employes of the 200-room Park Hotel, which burned Friday night, but police would not confirm the report.

The spokesman said police were also looking into the possibility that an electrical short circuit in the hotel lobby could have sparked the blaze.

Earlier Sunday, police said they were investigating the possibility of arson connected with a group of youths thrown out of the hotel nightclub.

Compost Pile Contained In Bin

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

Some home gardeners do not have compost piles because they have no place to hide an unsightly but very worthwhile mess. Or perhaps turning the stuff over regularly to let in air to help decomposition of the organic matter is too laborious.

To make the job easier, there are compost starters, layering and shredding devices, but composting still takes months until you get rich, black results to improve your soil.

Now there is a Compostumbler, which serves as a containing bin easy to revolve at regular intervals.

The maker relates that his device speeds the rate of decomposition to 14 days.

Basically, the apparatus is a horizontal, rotating drum that retains the heat needed for decomposition, protects the compost from the weather, and makes daily turning a 60-second job.

"Fly-screened vents on the sides and bottom allow air circulation through the compost to maintain bacterial activity," the company relates, "while keeping annoying pests away. The corrosion-protected steel drum retains the nutrient laden liquid essence of the compost which usually leaches away in normal compost piles."

The drum holds 14 bushels. It rotates on rubber rollers mounted on a tubular steel frame. A crank permits easy turning to mix contents for maximum aeration and speed of decomposition — five turns a day.

A removable door on the side allows easy loading, unloading and inspection of contents. The tight seal retains moisture in the compost, eliminating need to add water except where thoroughly dry matter is used.

You do not add new organic matter to working compost, since this will lengthen the ready time. No organic matter is saved for the next batch.

When the 14 days are up, you trundle your wheelbarrow under the drum, rotate and open when the door is in proper position.

No Kidding! Arizona Goat Had 5 Kids

Phoenix, Ariz. (UPI) — A Nubian dairy goat has given birth to five kids, beating "astronomical odds."

The 4-year-old Lela, owned by Albert Hahn and his wife Karen, matched her first two kiddings with the latest birth. The goat gave birth to three kids the first time and two the next.

Hahn said the odds of a goat giving birth to quintuplets is "astronomical."

Golden Oldie Letter Is Good For Chuckle

dear abby

DEAR READERS: I am presently writing a book that will contain choice letters I've received in the last 20 years. In selecting the material, I came across a letter that gave me a chuckle. I hope it gives you one, too. It was published in my column in October, 1968:

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 44-year-old bachelor who digs women, but I'm not looking for any matrimonial involvements. I live alone in a modest bungalow and enjoy my privacy.

My problem is an aggressive divorcee who lives next door. She's not bad looking, but she comes on awfully strong. She's a rip-roarin' Republican and a Nixon booster from way back. If she sees a light in my place, she runs right over with a prepared meal and an armful of Nixon campaign literature. She's even offered to cook for me and do my ironing, but I'm not about to fall into that trap. When she's not trying to sell me on Nixon, she's talking about marriage.

Last week I had it, so I moved my refrigerator, stove and TV down to the basement so she won't know I'm home. So now she phones me! What should I do?

NOT INTERESTED

DEAR NOT: Tell her you've going to vote for Hubert and move back upstairs!

DEAR ABBY: PENNA. READER wrote: "I went to a nice supper club with my lady friend and another couple, when a male friend of the other couple approached me and asked if I minded if he danced with my date. I said 'Yes, I do mind,' and my date thought I was rude."

You said, "You were. You should have asked your date if SHE wanted to dance with the stranger."

Well, I think you were wrong. Why should a man who goes to a supper club (and probably left his wife or girlfriend at home) expect some other guy to provide him with a girl to dance with?

I say, nuts to him. If he likes to dance, let him bring his own date!

WYOMINGITE

DEAR WYOMINGITE: I led with my chin on that one. You're right!

DEAR ABBY: A school dance is coming up next month, and the girls are supposed to ask the boys.

I want to ask a certain boy I know, but my mom says I shouldn't ask a boy who hasn't ever asked me out, and this one hasn't.

Abby, I think it's only fair that this once I should be able to ask the boy I really want to ask. What do you think?

TO ASK OR NOT TO ASK

DEAR TO ASK: The purpose of a girl-ask-boy dance is to change the boy-ask-girl tradition with which girls have been stuck for so long. If girls ask only boys who have asked them out, where's the breakthrough?

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Opening lead — queen of clubs.

This remarkable deal was played many years ago by Helen Sobel. She was in seven spades and West led the queen of clubs. It can be seen that if South leads the A-K-Q of hearts after drawing trumps, the contract fails because of the 4-1 heart division.

However, Mrs. Sobel made the grand slam — without seeing the East-West cards — and in a perfectly reasonable manner.

She won the club lead with the king, cashed the A-Q of trumps and ace of diamonds, then ruffed a diamond. After playing a club to the ace, she ruffed another diamond.

Mrs. Sobel then cashed the ace of hearts before ruffing her last club in dummy, and led the four of hearts. When East followed with the five, Mrs. Sobel played the six! When the six won, she had the rest of the tricks.

Of course, anyone seeing the adverse cards would have done just as well. But Mrs. Sobel performed the feat without that advantage and, furthermore, the accomplishment was not just a shot in the dark.

On the contrary, she was 100 per cent certain the heart finesse would succeed. It was a matter of simple arithmetic.

Mrs. Sobel realized that West had started with seven clubs, since East had shown out on the second club lead. She was also aware that West had started with two trumps. Furthermore, she had seen West follow to three rounds of diamonds and one round of hearts.

All 13 of West's cards were thus accounted for at the point when Mrs. Sobel played the four of hearts from dummy. Finessing the six was no hazard at all — the six was sure to win all the marbles.

Taste Barrier Broken.

Struggle to get taste into low tar smoking ends suddenly with new 'Enriched Flavor' discovery for 9 mg. tar MERIT.

For years, dependency on tar for taste has created a taste "barrier" for low tar cigarettes.

A limit on how good a low tar smoke could taste

Now that barrier has been broken.

Broken for good by a remarkable cigarette called MERIT.

MERIT packs 'Enriched Flavor.' A radical new taste discovery so effective at fortifying tobacco with extra flavor that MERIT actually delivers as much—or more—taste than cigarettes having higher tar.

Up to 60% higher tar.

Yet MERIT has only 9 mg. tar. One of the lowest tar levels in smoking today. Lower in fact, than 98% of all cigarettes sold

Thousands of smokers were tested. The results were conclusive

If you smoke, you'll be interested.

Smokers Report MERIT Delivers More Taste

9 mg tar MERIT was taste-tested against five current leading low tar cigarette brands ranging from 11 mg to 15 mg. tar.

Thousands of filter smokers were involved, smokers like yourself all tested at home.*

Even if the cigarette tested had 60% more tar, a significant majority of all smokers tested reported new 'Enriched Flavor' MERIT delivered more taste.

Repeat: delivered more taste.

In similar tests against 11 mg. to 15 mg. menthol brands, 9 mg. tar MERIT MENTHOL performed strongly too, delivering as much—or more—taste than the higher tar brands tested.

You've been smoking "low tar, good taste" claims long enough. Now smoke the cigarette.

Planting Early: Good Gamble

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

Plant early and beat the neighbors!

If you're willing to gamble with spring frosts and the soil is mellow and warm in the top two inches, you can get your garden in early and reap the harvest ahead of your friends.

According to the Lancaster County Extension Office, potatoes and peas may be planted as early as March 25, while onions, lettuce, radishes, spinach and cabbage may be planted the first few days of April.

Carrots, cauliflower and beets should be planted later in April; and beans, corn, squash, tomatoes, peppers, egg plant, cucumbers and melons should wait until May.

Small amounts of radish, lettuce and spinach seed can be planted in March while two hills of tomato seed can be planted in early April.

Dr. Brent Hoadley, district Extension horticulturist for southeast Nebraska, encourages planting on high ground to provide for good water drainage.

An advocate of a garden plan or scale drawing of the garden in advance, Dr. Hoadley said a plan allows mistakes on paper so that you don't use the space for something needless.

Such a plan also enables the gardener to purchase the right amount of seeds, taking into consideration the family size and how much is to be grown for canning or freezing.

Garden rows should run north and south, according to Dr. Hoadley, and the garden should be located away from trees and shrubs in as much sun as possible.

Experts advise planting similar crops in the same area of a garden. For example, perennial crops should be planted in one area, early garden crops in another and warmer season crops in a third area.

Soil preparation is essential for a successful garden, and ideally the soil was prepared last fall for this year's garden.

However, many gardeners did not make this preparation, so Dr. Hoadley suggests working it as soon as the frost goes out of the ground.

Organic matter worked into the soil is beneficial, he said, suggesting that three or four bushes of barnyard manure be used for 100 square feet of garden.

If manure is not available, the same amount of well-rotted leaves can be substituted. A commercial fertilizer also can be used.

Other suggestions for gambling with spring frosts to beat the race with the neighbors for the first fresh garden vegetables are:

— Plant two rows of early-type sweet corn and one row of beans April 15.

— Plant small smounts of kale and chard seed in April.

— Use hot caps on cabbage, tomato, pepper and eggplants.

— Pull loose, dry dirt over emerging potato and bean plants if the weather forecast is for frost before morning.

— Sprinkle the garden with water from the hose before sunup on frosty mornings.

— Paper or cardboard is a much better cover than tin or glass to save plants from cold. Large fiber flowerpots and clay pots also do the job.

The Extension Service also strongly urges prospective gardeners to get double duty out of garden space by planting in March and April and then again in July and August for fall crops.

Succession planting of some vegetables is also encouraged so that fresh vegetables are available during the entire season.

By use of succession planting, a plot of 40 by 60 feet will provide sufficient vegetables year around for a family of four, according to County Extension Agent Emery Nelson.

Factors Can Keep Water From Washing Out Profit

Given the right soil and conditions, you may not be forced to wash down your garden savings with costly water.

Lancaster County Extension Agent Emery Nelson says he grew a tremendously good garden in Lincoln's hot, dry summer of 1975 without benefit of added water.

The secret is picking good soil that will hold moisture and produce in a dry year, he said, noting that he doesn't foresee this year being any hotter and drier than it was last year when his garden was a success.

Nelson also suggests using mulch to keep the soil cool and to prevent washing. Protection from south and southeast wind is also important, he said, noting that planting of tall crops such as corn or sunflowers on the south side or fencing in the area can help eliminate this problem.

However, if it is necessary to water for a productive garden, it is going to cut into the dollar savings realized from a successful garden.

According to Nelson, the average garden may require between 12 and 16 inches of water during the growing season. However, many factors may alter this figure — kind of soil, use of good mulch, drainage, types of plants and whether it is a normal, dry or wet season.

In an average year, it may be necessary to water only eight times — applying approximately two inches with each application, he said.

According to figures prepared by Jack Vavra, Lincoln city utilities business manager, 1,495 gallons or 1.99 HCFs (hundred cubic feet) of water are necessary to cover a 2,400 square foot garden plot with one inch of moisture.

Using an average rate figure of 37¢ per HCF, it would cost 73.7¢ to apply one inch of water to a 2,400 square foot area, Vavra said.

However, there are many variables in water rates under the present system, depending upon average usage by the customer and the purpose for which the water is used. Therefore, the 37¢ per HCF rate may not apply to every customer — some may be less, others more.

Vavra said gardening is a much more efficient use of water than lawn watering because garden soil is loose. Evaporation and runoff in lawn watering makes it much more costly to sprinkle the lawn than to water a garden of the same size.

No Seed Shortage Seen

With no nationwide threats of garden seed shortages this year, seed sales are lagging behind 1975.

Lincoln seed dealers are optimistic and anticipate a 10% increase over last year's sales in spite of slow sales to date.

Threatened seed shortages last year prompted early 1975 sales which ran anywhere from 20% to 100% over the previous year at various outlets in town.

Local dealers feel ample supply as well as instability in the weather have slowed sales this year.

Jim Kinghorn, manager of Earl May Seeds, said his store has had no difficulty getting seeds and foresees shortages in only one or two isolated varieties.

Bob Berrier of Williams Garden Center said he anticipates a pickup in sales in the next week when the weather is more stable.

The weather has definitely been a factor in the last two weeks, according to a spokesman for Campbell's Nurseries.

Sales have slowed somewhat with the drop in temperatures and snow but sales were exceptionally good in early February when the weather was unseasonably warm, she said.

Eva Statler of Statler's Garden Center said seed sales are lagging slightly from last year but attributed this to the weather.

She also reported that she had not received a group of seeds from one company, and many of her customers are waiting for the arrival of those seeds.

Neighbors Help

Princeton, N.J. (UPI) — Although community gardening is increasing on public land and institutional property, most such gardens are planted on land belonging to a neighbor or a private landowner, according to a Gallup Organization survey.

Sterilize Compost

Rochester, N.Y. (UPI) — Gardners who use their own compost for seed starting are advised to sterilize it before sowing to prevent damping-off. A seedsman here recommends baking it until all the soil reaches 180 degrees and remains that temperature for 30 minutes. Instead of using a thermometer, he suggests burying a potato in the soil. The compost will be sterilized by the time the spud is thoroughly cooked.

Weight Watcher® Member Loses 258 Pounds!

In January of 1972 Estelle Kramer of Wahoo, Nebraska, made the biggest decision of her life. Overweight and constantly tired, Estelle found little enjoyment in life, and was plagued with worry about her health and well-being. It was then she decided to join Weight Watchers.

"Anyone who has ever been on any diet knows how boring it can become. But the Weight Watchers Program is not a diet! The variety of food is unbelievable, and the amounts you receive are quite generous. Once I realized I could eat quite a bit, I got myself under control and did real well."

Estelle never lost sight of her goal, and with the added support of her Weight Watchers classmates and friends she reached her goal weight in October of last year.

A loss of 258 pounds!

"Before my weight loss I just existed, now I look forward to every day!" says Estelle.

"I know I still have a challenge ahead of me to control my weight for the rest of my life," but with the Weight Watchers Maintenance Plan and her Lifetime Membership, Estelle should have very few problems.

'Best Filly'

Grand Island — Trainer Larry Staroscik declined to term Les Horn s Ajic Jay the best animal he s ever trained But that didn t indicate any displeasure with the 3 year-old filly

I don t know if I'd call her the best horse I've ever trained," said Staroscik after Ajic Jay captured the $4,000 Baxter Handicap here Saturday at Fonner Park "She's the best filly I've ever trained She's easy to train and she's a real intelligent horse

She doesn t overtrain herself in the morning Her workout times aren t real fast he said She lays back off the pace in all her races and then comes from behind

That strategy worked again

Wayne Anderson kept Ajic Jay behind the leaders in the six-furlong chase that attracted 10 3 year-olds But he gave supporters of the 3 2 favorite some anxious moments when he swung wide at the top of the stretch after gaining the lead on the far turn

I m sure she lost some ground but I think it was better that way than if he had stayed near the rail and got in trouble Staroscik said Wayne didn t really lose that much ground He went to the middle of the track and then let her run She was still fresh at the end

Staroscik said he left the riding instructions with Anderson He s ridden her in four previous wins so I just told him to use his own judgment he noted

Elks Test Next

Ajic Jay hopefully will be able to increase her distance running the trainer said Her next assignment will be the Elks Handicap on April 3 That s a 6½ furlong chase for 3 year-olds with a $6 000-added purse

Ajic Jay stopped second favorite Bob's Decision by one length while Bob s Decision was 1½ lengths better than Corn Sprout, who was third

In fact the first six horses finished within five lengths of each other -- a fact which pleased Fonner racing secretary Dean Williams

You bet I m pleased it was that close said Williams who assigned the weights We ve had older cheaper claiming races with real close finishes but this was very close for a handicap race

Another happy person at Fonner was general manager Al Swihart who saw three mutuel records shattered in the best day Fonner has experienced in 23 years

The total mutuel handle of $667 292 eclipsed the previous best day $639 664 on April 5 1975) by $27 628

The daily double handle of $66 814 topped the former mark of $65 816 (set on April 5 1975) and the combined handle of the sixth race and exacta ($97 814) was also a record surpassing the former mark of $92 042 on April 19 1973

The handle on the Baxter Handicap of $72 496 was just $1 772 short of the one-race record of $74 268

Perhaps the one-near-record most obvious Saturday was the crowd of 9 202 just 15 short of the one-day attendance mark of 9,217 set on March 21 1970

That s just about the limit of Fonner s grandstand With temperatures in the 40s and the wind blowing generously most patrons were inside causing congestion and making it difficult to get to the mutuel windows

That problem has already started Swihart thinking about expansion He admitted that several architects have been consulted about the feasible expansion plans for Fonner

The clubhouse definitely will be expanded next year although the additional amount of room still has not been determined

Another possibility is to add windows and perhaps tables behind the top row of the grandstand which would give Fonner three betting levels

Regardless it s a problem that most general managers would relish It s just another chapter in the phenomenal growth of Fonner Park under the leadership of Al Swihart and his assistant Hugh Miner

Kentucky Helped To NIT Win

NEW YORK (AP) — The Kentucky Wildcats won their first National Invitation Tournament championship since 1946—but the needed help to do it

First the North Carolina Charlotte coach helped them then the North Carolina Charlotte team—and the result was an exciting 71-67 victory Sunday in the final at Madison Square Garden

With North Carolina-Charlotte holding a seven point lead at 54-47 and 10 11 left in the game Coach Lee Rose order his 49ers to go into a slow-down while Kentucky s entire front court was sitting on the bench in foul trouble

Phillips big play at the end was a super effort and we really needed it said Hall The big thing about this team is that for the last 10 games they have simply refused to be beaten I had all the confidence in the world that we were going to win this one

Hall might have had all the confidence but nobody really knew who was going to win the game until the final minute The 49ers committed two key turnovers at the end to help the Wildcats nail down the title

The NIT s 39th championship game wasn t decided before Phillips took over with three foul shots and a field goal

The teams were never more than seven points apart in the wild second half before the game [illegible] with 1 06 remaining Before the Wildcats took charge Cedric Maxwell scored two of his game-leading 24 points with 1 30 remaining while the crowd of 12 415 most of it North Carolina Charlotte rooters cheered the 49ers on

Big Ten Cagers Get New Name: 'Big 2 — Little 8'

By United Press International

The term Big Two Little Eight is no longer the exclusive property of the Big Ten in the description of its football fortunes

The calling card can also be attached to the Big Ten s basketball efforts now that surprising Michigan has joined not so surprising Indiana in the final four of the NCAA tournament

And you can bet the roundball Big Two will carry the conference s pride a bit farther than the other Big Two did in postseason football adventures

Michigan runnerup to undefeated Indiana during the Big Ten s regular season despite winning 14-of 18 games toppled Big Eight champion Missouri 95-88 Saturday to win the Midwest regional Indiana the No 1 ranked team all season methodically mowed down No 2 ranked Marquette 65-56 to win the Mideast regional

The other two NCAA semifinal berths went to defending champion UCLA an 82-66 victor over Arizona in the West regional and third ranked Rutgers a 91 75 winner over VMI in the East regional

The four survivors will gather this weekend in Philadelphia with the two semifinal games Saturday and the championship game Monday night

Michigan could not match Missouri guard Willie Smith but the Tigers did not posess the overall bench to match the Wolverines And one man does not a team nor champion make

Smith scored 43 points but was neutralized late in the game by reserve guard Dave Baxter a defensive move by Coach Johnny Orr which enabled Michigan to gain the final four for the first time since 1965 when the Cazzie Russell-led Wolverines fell to UCLA in the title game 91-80

Baxter held Smith to one basket in the final five minutes and finished with 18 points of his own

I m just not used to losing never have been said Smith We could have gone either way but I can t take anything away from them they re a great team

Indiana s victory may have cost the NCAA one of its most colorful characters —Marquette Coach Al McGuire—who was called for two technical fouls in the game and afterwards claimed he was through forever with tournament play

I won t come to any more tournaments said McGuire in an emotional press conference after the loss I personally feel I m affecting my team s play in tournaments

If we make a tournament while I m still around I will let my assistants handle it I didn t tell the team this They will probably read this in the newspapers

Maybe I m paranoid If I am I m making everyone else around me paranoid You get a hangup and you push too hard and you try too hard

All America forward Richard Washington scored 22 points to help UCLA beat Arizona and set up a rematch with Indiana The Bruins opened the regular season last November against the Hoosiers but finished a 20-point loser 84-64

I m looking forward to playing Indiana Bartow said [illegible] super team with a super coach But if we play the way we have in some of our last games we can play with any college team in the country And after all Indiana is a college team

Veterans Raise Wesleyan Hopes

By KEN HAMBLETON
State College Writer

Nebraska Wesleyan baseball coach Ron Bachman only needs to hope for one thing this year to make the season successful Good Weather

The Plainsmen return their top four pitchers and an all veteran infield and outfield besides picking up some top freshman prospects Potential is we have the talent to be the best NWU team ever said Bachman We have solid pitching good defense and strong power

NWU is 3-7 but the losses include two one run losses to Oklahoma Christian and two to Oklahoma City and Northwest Missouri State All three are considered baseball powers with NW Missouri placing fifth in the NCAA Division II last year and Oklahoma City gaining a winning record in Division I last year

The Plainsmen open their home slate Wednesday at 1 p m at Sherman Field in a rematch with Northwest Missouri State

I ve always said I d rather lose to a good team than beat a poor team said Bachman And with a tough schedule early in the season we expect to sharpen up for our conference schedule

The Plainsmen boast a 40-game schedule [illegible] with home-and-home [illegible] against all the Nebraska Intercollegiate [illegible] teams

The [illegible] team we re [illegible] schedule is Nebraska said Bachman

Bachman said he is glad he has all his pitchers back this year because of the schedule You schedule a lot of games and hope [illegible] get rained [illegible] play [illegible] the rest of the scheduled games we re going to need good pitching

has a good breaking pitch and a good change up

Seniors Mike Ginn and Larry Abel both righthanders and Dan Klaus who will join the team after working for a state senator with sophomore Ted Hall fill out the starting rotation

Ginn is a good heady pitcher and Ball has the record for most saves said Bachman and both are good control pitchers

A veteran infield of shortstop Scott Votava third baseman Jim Hammersky first baseman Byron Stallworth and catcher Gene Lessman give Bachman hopes of a fourth straight conference title this year

Stallworth and Votava were the top two base stealers on last year s team with Stallworth successful on all 20 attempts Hammersky was last year s leading hitter with a 371 average

Second base was kind of a problem spot for us said Bachman But Doug Neil a freshman from Lincoln Northeast and Gerry Seitz are filling in adequately for us

Leftfielder Bob Blake a 356 hitter last year with five home runs centerfielder Mike Reta and freshman rightfielder Doug Votava anchor the outfield for the Plainsmen

Poll Shows:

People Losing Confidence In Major U.S. Institutions

By LOUIS HARRIS

Public confidence in major U.S. institutions is at its lowest point since the Harris Survey began making such measurements 10 years ago.

At the bottom of the list is Congress, with only nine per cent of the American people expressing a great deal of confidence in congressmen. Only a bit higher is the executive branch of the federal government, with a confidence rating of 11%.

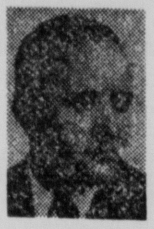
But the private sector does not fare much better, as a Harris Survey of 1,512 adults taken at the beginning of March shows:

—Great confidence in the people running major companies has plummeted to 16%, down from 19% last year and from a high of 55% 10 years ago.

—Doctors get a 42% rating, down from 73% in 1966.

—Leaders of higher education have dropped to 31% on the confidence scale. They rated 61% a decade ago.

—People running organized religion are at a 10-year low with a 24% rating, down from a high of 41%.



Louis Harris

Congress At Bottom

—Military leaders stir great confidence in 23% of the public, a sharp fall-off from 62% in 1966.

—Confidence in the media has also tailed off after three years of rising ratings. The press now receives a 20% mark, compared to 26% a year ago and 30% in 1973. The all-time low for the press was recorded back in 1971 at 18%.

The people running television news inspire a great deal of confidence in 28% of the public, down from 35% a year ago and from an even higher 41% back in 1973, when the Watergate hearings were carried on TV.

Although confidence has declined in both private and public institutions, the status of government seems to have suffered the most. This has a particular significance in view of the upcoming presidential election. The inability of political leaders to inspire confidence is the key reason why turnout at the polls has been declining in recent years.

In another question, the public was asked how it felt about the trend in leadership "both inside and outside of government" compared to 10 years ago. A substantial 55% of the people answered that the caliber of leadership had grown "worse," 9% said "better" and 31% thought it had remained "about the same." Associated with this decline in confidence is the finding that a plurality of 45% believe that the quality of life in the country has "grown worse" over the past decade, compared to 31% who feel it has "improved."

A high 67% of the people say that "the trouble with most leaders is that they don't understand people want better quality of almost everything they have rather than more quantity."

These findings show that there is a relationship between the public's confidence in national leadership and its feelings about the quality of life. It would seem that unless the leadership of the country, in and out of government, begins to show that it is capable of improving the quality of life, it is going to be in deep trouble with the public.

Healey Enters Cabinet Contest

London (AP) — Britain's Chancellor of the Exchequer, Denis Healy, entered the Labor party leadership struggle. He became the sixth cabinet minister seeking to replace Prime Minister Harold Wilson, who is to resign.

Healey's entry into the leadership stakes to determine the man almost certain to become the next prime minister threw the contest wide open.

The leader will be chosen by 317 Labor party Members of Parliament with the winner needing a clear majority of 159 votes. The results of the first ballot will be known next Thursday, but it could go to two or three ballots stretching to Apri 5.

Airline Expanding

New York (UPI) — Air Canada, which already operates from 10 cities in the United States, is expanding services this year in connection with the most comprehensive Canadian tour program ever offered by the airlines. New operations will include a nonstop service from Boston to Toronto, Chicago to Calgary, Cleveland to Montreal, and Portland, Maine, to Montreal.

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplane

Disneyland — In 1960 the State Department told Nikita Khrushchev, then in Los Angeles, that he could not visit Disneyland. Not that they were afraid the rugged Russian would cop a Mickey Mouse pin.

No, they were afraid of his "security." God knows what assassins lay in wait among the crashing teacup ride in Alice in Wonderland's mad tea party. It was a grave mistake — the kind made by diplomats who keep out of trouble by keeping out of everything.

Khrushchev made off for home announcing he would top Disneyland by building a "Miracleland" in Moscow. Who knows what detente was lost by denying the premier the jolting thrill of Mr. Toad's Wild Rice.

We came down to see how Disneyland is doing after all this time. Bringing my 12-year-old boy and a pal just to keep things in perspective.

I first came to Disneyland 20 years ago. Walt Disney's magic land had been open two years. Already the bankers who had denied him loans were eager to lay on anything he wanted for expansion.

Disney himself was unable to explain the success: "I just spread a little pollen here and a little pollen there," he told us.

At that time we came into the Disneyland Hotel by helicopter. On a clear day you could see a lot of orange trees in Orange County.

There were only five hotels — there are 125 now. The orange trees we saw from the 11th floor have disappeared under the concrete of Disneyland's parking lot that holds 11,500 cars.

Each year 10 million people come to Disneyland. It is the greatest tourist attraction in California. Quite likely the greatest in America.

☆ ☆ ☆

While the oranges were squeezed out, by-product parks sprang up. The best known is Knott's Berry Farm — neither a farm nor does it have berries.

There's a Movieland Wax Museum. A Lion Country Safari. Auto museums and airplane museums and a Japanese Village.

They are slick. They make money. And they make the genius of Disney stand out like the lily among field daisies.

☆ ☆ ☆

Disney was living gloriously as the fantasies were wired, computerized, made to move and amaze everybody. The first heads of state were arriving at Disneyland Hotel for royal tours.

Richard Nixon was vice president. (Khrushchev was glad to have Dick Nixon to kick around which he did with gusto in "the kitchen debate" in Moscow. (A debate about like Muhammad Ali's recent five-round debate with the Belgian 'unloaded' bombshell.)

Disney scouts scoured the world for rare plants: For real jungle growth in the Jungle River Ride. For pine trees that would cooperate with Disney and grow only one inch a year.

We couldn't say enough about Disneyland. My clips show I got caught in those terrible statistics we fall into when words fail us. "Umpty-ump acres tended by umpty-ump employes."

It was a familiar place I came back to. The pirates of the Caribbean are as ferocious as ever. The monorail slides smoothly from Tomorrowland back to today at the Disneyland Hotel station.

Did you know...

1. 25,000 homes in Lincoln have substandard insulation?
2. If these 25,000 homes were insulated properly, it would result in a 30% savings in energy required for heating and a 20% savings in energy required for summer cooling?
3. Electricity saved from those 25,000 homes during one summer could run the city's street lights for one year?
4. Adequate insulation can be written off in about three years from the savings realized in heating and air conditioning costs?

Those are the facts. Your Lincoln Electric System is vitally concerned with energy savings, and you are vitally interested in "shaving" your utility bills. Proper insulation is one way. There are many others. If you'd like to know more of these, drop in at your Lincoln Electric System's Business Office and ask for "Energy Conserving Hints".

NBA Officials Confirm Salary Pooling

NEW YORK (AP) — Several team officials from the National Basketball Association confirmed the previous existence of a pooling arrangement to pay for the league's top stars. But one NBA official charged that the American Basketball Association has engaged in the same practice.

And if that charge is substantiated, it could jeopardize the ABA's antitrust suit against the NBA, legal sources said.

William Alverson, president of the Milwaukee Bucks, confirmed on Sunday a New York Times story, which said that all the NBA teams were contributing part of the big-dollar salaries of such superstars as Rick Barry, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Elvin Hayes. The Times said the practice began in 1968 and continued for at least five years.

"It was done with something like one player per team, not just four or five in the league," said Alverson. "We pooled the total salaries, and clubs either got money back or sent the net to the league office to even things up.

"It ended in 1971," Alverson said. "We cut it out because the ABA claimed in a lawsuit that it was hurting them. Since then, the ABA has been doing exactly the same thing, after complaining about it."

Franklin Mieuli, owner of the Golden State Warriors, said, however, that the practice lasted until the 1973 season. He said that part of Barry's annual salary was paid by the other NBA teams after Barry returned to the NBA in 1972, but that the NBA hasn't shared in those payments in the last two years.

The lawsuit, the ABA's antitrust action against the NBA, is scheduled to go to trial June 1 in federal court here. The information for the Times article came from documents on file for that case.

A spokesman for the ABA said he could not comment on Alverson's charge because of fear of prejudicing the upcoming case. Jim Bindley, general manager of the ABA's Indiana Pacers, also refused comment because of the lawsuit but added: "I've only been general manager since November, but to my knowledge there hasn't been poolings in the ABA."

However, the Times said while there is no direct evidence that the ABA had a similar share-the-salary agreement, documents on file in federal court in New York "make clear that some ABA teams got reductions in their league assessments for signing such stars as Julius Erving (New York) and David Thompson (Denver)."

Roy Boe, owner of the New York Nets, refused comment and Carl Scheer, owner of the Denver Nuggets, was unavailable for comment.

An ABA source confirmed that the practice of reducing league assessments exists but he did not know of any pooling arrangement to pay salaries.

In the ABA's upcoming antitrust case, whether the league did or did not pool salaries becomes legally significant because of "the clean hands doctrine."

Basically, a party can't seek damages for a violation if it has engaged in the same illegal practice, legal sources said.

The ABA may allege that the NBA's pooling practice was an illegal restraint of trade, but if the ABA committed the same restraint, it would not be able to claim damages, one lawyer said. The reduced assessments for signing Erving and Thompson might or might not be the equivalent of the NBA's pooling practice, he added.

Another lawyer said the theory could be argued that what "is illegal for the big guy in an antitrust action may not be illegal for the little guy."

In any case, the ABA could claim that its survival was at stake, one lawyer said, and it had to act because of what the NBA had done before. "The ABA could say it was more unreasonable for them to act so we should still get damages."

However, the ABA suit is generally regarded as an attempt to force a merger with the NBA.

In separate interviews, NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien and ABA Commissioner Dave DeBusschere were asked about merger and the antitrust case.

"Merger discussions are so premature as to jeopardize our current posture in the courts," O'Brien said.

DeBusschere said the settlement of the antitrust case could be part of over-all merger discussions.

"I think merger is in the best interests of professional basketball," DeBusschere said. "What we have to face up to is what's best for the industry itself."

Skiier Sabich Shot Dead

ASPEN, Colo. (UPI) — Two-time World Pro skiing champion Vladimir "Spider" Sabich was shot and killed Sunday night, authorities said.

Police refused to say whether any arrests were made but sources said Sabich's girl friend, singer Claudine Longet may be a suspect.

Sabich, 31, won the World Pro Ski crown for the 1970-71 and 71-72 seasons. He had been inactive since suffering a vertabrae fracture in the last race of the 1973 season.

Sabich, who started his amateur skiing career at Colorado University, finished fifth in the 1968 Winter Olympics at Grenoble.

In Simants Murder Case:

Town Grapevine Spread News Reporters Were Barred From Printing

(EDITOR'S NOTE): This is the second of three articles telling how a lurid Nebraska case has brought to the surface a basic question of Constitutional law. Fred W. Friendly is a professor of journalism at Columbia University.)

By FRED W. FRIENDLY

Sutherland (Neb.) is a bleak, prairie village that vibrates when the long Union Pacific freight trains thunder through. Its people — ranchers and railroad workers, now swollen with construction crews building a state power plant — view North Platte with the suspicion that North Platte views Omaha and Omaha views New York.

In North Platte and Sutherland, gun control laws are fighting words; they are seldom even discussed in a community where virtually every home has a gun, and many have prized collections of rifles and pistols.

So it was not unusual that Erwin Charles Simants, an unemployed handyman and fence builder with an I.Q. of 75, should have access to the .22 caliber rifle in the home of his brother-in-law, William Boggs.

On the evening of October 18, Simants, who is often called "Herbie" by members of his family, borrowed the rifle, crossed the narrow yard to the house of James Henry Kellie, where he found 10-year-old Florence Kellie, He raped her and killed her; powder burns on her forehead indicated she had been shot at point-blank range. Other members of the Kellie family, who were not in the house, came inside and were murdered as the frightened Simants attempted to eliminate all witnesses. They included James Henry, 66; Audrey Marie, 57; Deanne, 7; Daniel, 5; and David, 3.

Hardened Investigators Shocked

Even hardened state police investigators were shocked by the fury of the massacre and the strong implication, later documented in part of Simant's statement, that there had been sexual assaults even after death.

After the shootings, Simants returned the rifle to his sister's home, and told his 13-year-old nephew, Butch Boggs, "I've just killed the Kellies." At Simants's request, Butch called the home of the elder Simants, Amos and Grace. Simants told his mother about the murders and said, "I'm coming home." His father, a railroad worker, told Herbie that he didn't believe the story, but he was going over to the Kellies' to see for himself.

When Amos Simants opened the door of the Kellie residence, he was sickened by the sight and scent. Shaken, he returned home and told his wife to call the ambulance and the police. He also told his son to turn himself in.

Simants instead stopped by the Rodeo Bar, across from the Union Pacific railroad tracks, and had a beer. Then he walked west to the Longhorn Bar, drank one more beer and fled into the high weeds behind the Kellie and Boggs houses, where he hid through the night. Shortly before 8 a.m., Sunday, he walked to the back door of the Boggs house and was immediately arrested by a state police officer and Sheriff Gilster.

Whatever transpired in the deepest, darkest, most twisted part of this man's mind, to paraphrase Simants' defense lawyer, may never be known, but much of what happened in the Kellie house that night was known within hours by the Sutherland community.

The news spread by the kind of grapevine that exists in a town this size by a communication network unique to this one. The attendant on duty at "The Light Plant," the office of the local power plant which doubles as a 24-hour-a-day message center for fire, police, and other information, was dispensing a chatter of fact, hearsay and short-wave jargon coming in from ambulance attendants, deputy sheriffs and town officials.

But the reporters and cameramen, pouring in from all points in western Nebraska, and by chartered planes from Omaha, Lincoln and Denver, found it difficult to obtain any official information from the county prosecutors in charge of the case. Pressured by their night editors for more facts, they confronted law officers whose emotions were already charged by the night's gruesome events and the continuing search for the murderer.

The deputy county attorney, Marvin Holscher, a tough prosecutor with a record of many convictions and numerous tiffs with the Nebraska media, established a hedge in front of the Kellie residence as a sort of imaginary police line.

"Goddammit, I'm not going to try this case on the lawn of this house, or in the media," he yelled. A reporter from The Omaha World Herald, according to Holscher, shouted back, "You're not telling us what happened. I'm going to make you look like an ass." (The reporter, Frank Santiago, remembers it differently: "You're going to make an ass of yourself, Holscher.") The chief prosecutor, Milton Larson, recalls shouting, "There's a TV helicopter overhead, and we haven't even gotten the six bodies out."

Not Good Atmosphere For 'Guidelines'

It was hardly an atmosphere to nurture the spirit of the Nebraska bar-press voluntary guidelines for pretrial reporting, and over the course of the next several days, it appeared that the guidelines were all but forgotten by journalists as well as lawmen.

At 1:43 P.M. the Associated Press was finally able to transmit a story with the names of the victims, and that a neighbor of the Kellies was being sought. Sheriff "Hop" Gilster, so excited that he had suffered a slight heart attack, revealed to some reporters that the murder weapon, a .22 caliber rifle, was in police custody and that Simants had told his father about the murders that had transpired in the Kellie house. With little attention to guidelines, the A.P. carried a bulletin at 6:27 a.m. reporting his statements.

By 9 that morning, Simants had been booked, stripped of his clothing and boots, which would be used as evidence, had listened three times to the "Miranda card," warning that statements he might make could be used against him. Now he was making a confession.

This confession was not officially reported to the media, but 30 minutes before Simants's confession to the officers, prosecutor Larson was quoted by the A.P. as saying, "Simants apparently walked to his father's home after the shooting and told his father he was responsible for the deaths." However, the A.P. now says it erred in quoting Larson. Ed Nichols, A.P. bureau chief in Omaha, admits hearsay of the ambulance driver's husband was falsely attributed to Larson.

Sheriff Holds News Conference

Later that Sunday morning, Sheriff Gilster held a news conference, attended by both print and broadcast media, at which he went far beyond the guidelines that preclude "opinions concerning the guilt, the innocence or the character of the accused."

Reporter: It didn't surprise you (when the woman called the fire station to say Simants was out in the back yard.)

Sheriff: It didn't surprise me.

Reporter: Why didn't it surprise you?

Sheriff: Well, a lot of times they say they return to the scene . . .

Reporter: You mean . . . after he shot those people, he went in and got a drink in a bar?

Sheriff: Yes.

Reporter: Why did he kill those people?

Sheriff: I can't say at this time.

Radio stations and the A.P. and United Press International reported Sheriff Gilster's revelations Sunday afternoon and evening in considerable detail. However, what seemed most irresponsible to the judges and the lawyers in the proceeding was a television report received by Channel 2, KNOP, from the NBC network; it was aired on the news that night and on the "Today" show the following morning.

Jim Lee, a reporter for NBC affiliate KOA-TV in Denver, had flown in by chartered helicopter the night of the crime and flown back to Denver on Sunday after the sheriff's news conference. He told his audience that "Simants reportedly confessed to his father and then fled." The statement was fed in to North Platte via New York by a Denver-based newsman who had never heard of any Nebraska guidelines.

Confession Omitted

The following day, Monday, The Omaha World-Herald, circulation 238,000 and the dominant newspaper in the state, omitted any reference to Amos Simants's statement about his son's confession and did not report any of the sheriff's incriminating remarks implying that Simants had returned to the scene of the crime. However, the lead of a page-one story in The World-Herald's Monday edition read like something out of "The Front Page": "He was called a hot head, a loner, a drinker by those who knew him, but Erwin Charles Simants, suspected of killing six here Saturday night, remains an enigma to many."

The Monday edition of The North Platte Telegraph, circulation 17,000, devoted all but four inches of its front page to the mass murder, including a report that "the elder Simants tearfully said, "My son killed five or six people here.'

Enter now two judges. Judge Hugh Stuart is an experienced and respected district court judge with a reputation for running a disciplined courtroom. Judge Ronald Ruff, 34, is an unassuming Lincoln County Judge used to sitting on trials involving misdemeanors such as speeding violations and petty larceny. There is little love lost between them. Judge Stuart, says Judge Ruff, "once accused me of being the most immature and incompetent judge he had ever met."

Although the trial would be held in Judge Stuart's court, Judge Ruff would preside over the preliminary hearing required to establish that cause existed to hold Simants for trial. Judge Ruff dreaded the inflammatory aspects of the sordid Simants case, the probability that his nemesis, Judge Stuart, would preside at the trial, and the possibility of reversal. "I kept thinking of Sheppard vs. Maxwell . . . I didn't care what was in the paper; I just didn't want to be reversed," he says.

Judge Stuart Consulted

So Judge Ruff consulted Judge Stuart about the possibility of closing the hearing to the public and restricting press coverage so that the details of rape and necrophilia wouldn't be reported and broadcast over and over again before jury selection. Stuart advised Ruff that it was against Nebraska statutes to close the hearing and recalls telling him, "You can't restrain the media," and that he would be "opening a can of worms" with a restraining order. (Ruff claims that Stuart was vague and noncommittal about a restraining order.)

Meanwhile, prosecutor Larson was on the telephone consulting Nebraska Attorney General Paul Douglas, in Lincoln. A dynamic former district attorney who aspires to be Nebraska's senator, Douglas, according to Larson, told him, "Don't do it. Don't ask the court to put that restraining order on."

In spite of such admonitions, the prosecution and the county defender both moved that the news media be gagged, and the county defender also asked that the preliminary hearing be closed. Judge Ruff refused to close that procedure, but directed that there could be no reporting of any testimony or evidence produced at the hearing.

"When these two constitutional provisions come into conflict . . . the right of the free press must be subservient to the right of the accused to have due process," he declared. He cited the Supreme Court in Sheppard vs. Maxwell: "If publicity during the proceedings threatens the fairness of a jury trial, a new trial should be ordered."

Many lawyers believe that the High Court was referring to trials, not preliminary hearings and that the retrial ordered in Sheppard was intended to suggest alternate remedies open to judges other than press gags. However Ruff read it as authority for restraining orders and proclaimed, "This judge is not going to abdicate his duty." Though he previously had known little of the Nebraska Bar-Press Guidelines, Judge Ruff further ordered that they be mandatory.

Ironically, Judge Ruff never believed for a moment that his restraining order would be obeyed. "Me, gag the powerful Omaha World-Herald and The Lincoln Journal and The Chicago Tribune?" And many in and out of Nebraska news and bar circles ask why the gag order, considered unconstitutional by many authorities, was not defied. Executives at The Omaha World-Herald, The Lincoln Star and The North Platte Telegraph, conservative in nature, say they do not believe in civil disobedience and decided to fight it out in court.

But before they could do that, the preliminary hearing went on, with reporters barred from revealing any of the evidence or testimony produced, even though the courtroom was open to the public.

Those who attended got their money's worth. The purpose of the hearing was to prove that a crime was committed, and that there was probable cause to believe the suspect had committed it. In Simants's case, these facts could have been amply demonstrated in general terms, yet his preliminary hearing took up almost a full day of court and included the testimony of nine witnesses who spelled out many of the gruesome details of child molestations and other horrors.

Judge Ruff apparently permitted this anomalous situation — inadvertently leaving sensational tidbits of information for the local rumor mills while professional communications outlets remained gagged — because he was apprehensive about cutting off whatever record the prosecution wished to establish. Yet had he chosen to limit the testimony, he could have had an adequate preliminary hearing without having to restrain the press.

Order Obeyed But Appealed

The local press continued to obey the gag, but spokesmen for the Nebraska news organization appealed Judge Ruff's order to Judge Stuart. Judge Stuart now faced the task of reviewing a decision he had cautioned against. "I found myself with the major decision of my career and we just backed into it."

After a hearing on October 23, he decided to terminate Judge Ruff's order and initiate his own more carefully drawn restraining order. He prohibited the press from publishing any confession or admission of guilt of Simants, the results of the pathologist's report, the identity of the victims who had been sexually assaulted and the description of those crimes. He agreed with Ruff that the Nebraska Bar-Press Guidelines should be mandatory. He also prohibited the press from reporting some specifics of the gag order.

The Judge is painfully aware that this decision to continue the gag was inconsistent with his earlier advice. "I just want those nine Justices to understand the position I was in," he later said. Stuart feared that he could not lift Judge Ruff's gag without exposing himself to the threat of reversal and the thought of having the community buzzing about the necrophilia (defined as "an abnormal, often erotic attraction to dead bodies") haunted him.

In addition, Judge Stuart was offended by the remarks of an attorney for the Nebraska media who lectured the court: "Goodness gracious, we want this man to have a fair trial . . . but I'd let somebody go free who was guilty before I'd deny freedom of speech."

7 Israelis Held In Fire Probe

NETANYA, Israel (AP) — Police detained seven Israelis Sunday on suspicion of arson in connection with a hotel fire that killed four persons and injured 46, including six tourists from Miami Beach, Fla.

The state radio said some of the detainees were employes of the 200-room Park Hotel, which burned Friday night, but police would not confirm the report.

The spokesman said police were also looking into the possibility that an electrical short circuit in the hotel lobby could have sparked the blaze.

Earlier Sunday, police said they were investigating the possibility of arson connected with a group of youths thrown out of the hotel nightclub.

Italian Ski Racer Prevails

MONT STE. ANNE, Que. (UPI) — Italian Franco Bieler upset World Cup champion Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden Sunday in a dual slalom race, the last on the World Cup circuit this year.

The 25-year-old Italian easily won the first heat by 1.256 seconds before the 20-year-old Stenmark took the second run by 0.962 seconds to finish just 0.294 behind Bieler for the two runs.

Canadian Jim Hunter of Calgary, was third and another Italian, Fausto Radici, fourth.

The win for Bieler was his first on the World Cup circuit, although the dual slalom here—the only parallel race of the season—didn't count for individual World Cup points.

The race did count toward the Nations' Cup, however, but had no bearing on those final standings, which Austria wrapped up on Friday.

Despite rain and above freezing temperatures, the racers said they had good conditions for their runs through the 24 gates on the 290-meter (1,157 foot) course with a verticle drop of 90 meters (359 feet).

In getting to the finals, Bieler took a bye into the second round and then defeated American Steve Mahre, of White Pass, Wash., and two fellow Italians—Gustavo Thoeni and Radici—to set up the finals against Stenmark in the elimination event.

Stenmark's road to the finals saw wins over Canadian Dave Murray of Abbotsford, B.C., Austrian Anton Steiner, Peter Luescher of Switzerland and Hunter.

New Tires Aid Pearson's Victory

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — "Benny should have taken on all four tires," said David Pearson of the critical last pit stop that helped him beat Benny Parsons in Sunday's 17th annual Atlanta 500 stock car race.

"We put on four new tires and it really seemed to help," said Pearson, who fought back among the leaders after losing a lap with tire trouble earlier.

Parsons led Pearson when the two leaders made their final stop for fuel and tires during a caution period with about 50 miles left. Pearson's Mercury got new tires all the way around, while Parsons' Chevrolet took on only two outside tires.

Pearson agreed that, all things being equal, Parsons might have been able to hold on for victory.

"My car had a real bad vibration," explained Pearson, winner of three of this season's first seven NASCAR Grand National races. "I had to drive as hard as I ever have to keep up.

"If you don't believe me, just look at the blisters on my hands."

Parsons, of course, was disappointed with second place.

"Anytime you're overjoyed at finishing second, it is time to hang it up in this sport," he said glumly. "When David dropped off the pace before that last stop, I began to think that I might have a chance to win the race.

"Then he comes back stronger than ever and I knew I could forget about Victory Lane unless his car developed trouble. It's tough to sit there and know you can't win even though you're so close."

Parsons, leading the NASCAR Grand National points standings, was one of the few of the original group of leaders not to encounter problems during the four hour race.

Pearson lost a lap with tire troubles early in the race, but managed to make it up during caution periods and with the usual speedy work of his Wood brothers crew.

Third place Cale Yarborough, with his Chevrolet clearly the fastest car on the track, lost four laps midway through the race to change a broken distributor rotor. He managed to make up all but one circuit around the 1.522-mile Atlanta International Raceway oval.

Lennie Pond came in fourth, another lap back, with a smashed-up rear end on his Chevrolet—the result of a tangle with Bob Burcham late in the race.

Fifth place Darrell Waltrip nearly lost the hood on his Chevrolet early on, when the support brackets gave out. A long stop to tape up the problem was responsible for part of the three laps he finished behind.

Pole position starter Dave Marcis lost an engine in his Dodge early in the race.

NU Golfers To Visit Texas

Larry Romjue's Nebraska golf squad travels to Galveston, Tex. to compete Tuesday through Friday in the Galveston Island Invitational.

The tournament will be a 72-hole affair, attracting such schools as Iowa State, Wisconsin and Wichita State.

Two weeks ago, the Huskers placed sixth at the Menger Hotel Intercollegiate Golf Classic, and Romjue hopes his team can perform better at Galveston.

"I was not really that happy with how we performed," he said. "Although freshman Tony Pesavento and sophomore Doug Smith played well, as a team there was room for improvement."

14 Jailed At Idaho 'Fish-In'

SALMON, Idaho (AP) — Fourteen men were jailed over the weekend as wildlife officials and police cracked down on a "fish-in" by more than 250 persons protesting a ban on fishing in the Salmon River.

Most of the men arrested, including those a magistrate described as some of Salmon's "most-upstanding citizens," refused to sign citations for illegal fishing from the icy banks of the river near North Fork, 22 miles north of here. All pleaded innocent and were released after arraignment Saturday.

Several fisherman carried placards protesting closing of the river, also known as "River of No Return," by the Idaho Fish and Game Department which said the action would protect dwindling populations of salmon and steelhead trout.

The anglers claim there are enough fish to allow upstream sport fishing.

NAIA Cites State Trio

Kansas City, Mo. (UPI) — Three Nebraska small college basketball players have received honorable mention in the 1976 NAIA all-America basketball selections.

They were Joe Wharton, Doane College, Paul Bergman, Hastings College and Rick Anderson, Wayne State.

Steve Williams of Dana College finished fifth in individual free throw shooting with a .897 accuracy mark.

Ashe Halts Borg, 7-6, 6-3

KEAUHOU-KONA, Hawaii (UPI) — Arthur Ashe handed Bjorn Borg his first defeat in the World Championship Challenge Cup series, 6-4, 7-6, 6-3, Sunday in a $10,000 winner-take-all match that was marred by controversial line calls.

The victory was the second in a row for Ashe, while Borg dropped his first match in three decisions.

Most of the controversial calls went against Borg and the Swedish teenager let it bother him to the point that after losing the second set, it appeared he did not play with the same intensity and all but gave up.

The most controversial call came on the last point of the 12th game in the second set with Borg leading in games, 6-5. The game went to deuce when Ashe hit a forehand down the line and the ball was called good but many people in the crowd, and Borg, thought it was out. Borg even walked to the spot and circled with his racket where the ball appeared to him to go out. Ashe went on to win the game and tie the set at 6-all.

Though the crowd tried to encourage him, Borg appeared let down. Ashe went on to win the tie-breaker 7-3.

Ashe used his superior serve and volley game to keep Borg reaching on almost every return. Ashe deliberately kept Borg running wide on his forehand side in the one-hour, 42-minute long match.

Taste Barrier Broken.

Struggle to get taste into low tar smoking ends suddenly with new 'Enriched Flavor.' discovery for 9 mg. tar MERIT.

For years, dependency on tar for taste has created a taste "barrier" for low tar cigarettes.

A limit on how good a low tar smoke could taste.

Now that barrier has been broken.

Broken for good by a remarkable cigarette called MERIT.

MERIT packs 'Enriched Flavor.' A radical new taste discovery so effective at fortifying tobacco with extra flavor that MERIT actually delivers as much—or more—taste than cigarettes having higher tar.

Up to 60% higher tar.

Yet MERIT has only 9 mg. tar. One of the lowest tar levels in smoking today. Lower, in fact, than 98% of all cigarettes sold.

Thousands of smokers were tested. The results were conclusive.

If you smoke, you'll be interested.

Smokers Report MERIT Delivers More Taste

9 mg. tar MERIT was taste-tested against five current leading low tar cigarette brands ranging from 11 mg. to 15 mg. tar.

Thousands of filter smokers were involved, smokers like yourself, all tested at home.*

Even if the cigarette tested had 60% more tar, a significant majority of all smokers tested reported new 'Enriched Flavor' MERIT delivered more taste.

Repeat: delivered more taste.

In similar tests against 11 mg. to 15 mg. menthol brands, 9 mg. tar MERIT MENTHOL performed strongly too, delivering as much—or more—taste than the higher tar brands tested.

You've been smoking "low tar, good taste" claims long enough. Now smoke the cigarette.

MERIT. Unprecedented flavor at 9 mg. tar.

Runaway Plane Kills Woman, 51

Hot Springs Ark (UPI) Joyce Arvington who didn't know enough about airplanes to turn on the cockpit radio died Sunday in an attempt to stop a runaway pilotless aircraft

Officials said Mrs Arvington 51 of Wichita Kan was killed when the single-engine private plane crashed after an 18-minute pilotless flight

Pilot Jack Delhotal 54 of Wichita was stranded on the ground when the plane took off without him

Airport manager Ralph Disheroon said the starter on Delhotal's Cessna 210 was not working so he climbed out of the cabin and tried to start the engine by manually spinning the propeller

The engine started and the plane sped down the runway before Delhotal could get back inside It lifted off the ground with Mrs Arvington aboard

A plane will fly by itself It will take off if it's moving fast enough Disheroon said

Mrs Arvington knew nothing about flying a plane She couldn't even turn the radio on Disheroon said Efforts to talk the woman down didn't work because the radio wasn't on he said

Disheroon said the aircraft crashed after Mrs Arvington apparently pulled the key out of the ignition in an attempt to cut off the engine

Harris Aide: Campaign In 'Best Shape'

A national campaign aide to Fred Harris said that despite poor showings in early Democratic presidential primaries the Harris campaign is in the best shape to date — Fred is in the election to stay

Bert DeLieu Harris state campaign coordinator told workers at a strategy session that he bases this assessment on two facts a decision by Harris last week to change his national strategy and focus instead on a few key primary states and because popular recording stars are beginning concert tours for Fred Harris

DeLieu said the Harris campaign will mount a carefully planned effective and competitive drive in the April 27 Pennsylvania primary and expects to spend several hundred thousand dollars

A strong showing in Pennsylvania will give the Harris campaign momentum into the May primaries he said

The May 11 Nebraska primary will be important to the Harris campaign because of Fred's emphasis on family farm and soil resources legislation DeLieu said

'Best Filly'

Grand Island — Trainer Larry Staroscik declined to term Les Horn's Ajic Jay the best animal he's ever trained. But that didn't indicate any displeasure with the 3-year-old filly.

"I don't know if I'd call her the best horse I've ever trained," said Staroscik after Ajic Jay captured the $4,000 Baxter Handicap here Saturday at Fonner Park. "She's the best filly I've ever trained. She's easy to train and she's a real intelligent horse.

"She doesn't overtrain herself in the morning. Her workout times aren't real fast," he said. "She lays back off the pace in all her races and then comes from behind."

That strategy worked again.

Wayne Anderson kept Ajic Jay behind the leaders in the six-furlong chase that attracted 10 3-year-olds. But he gave supporters of the 3-2 favorite some anxious moments when he swung wide at the top of the stretch after gaining the lead on the far turn.

"I'm sure she lost some ground, but I think it was better that way than if he had stayed near the rail and got in trouble," Staroscik said. "Wayne didn't really lose that much ground. He went to the middle of the track and then let her run. She was still fresh at the end."

Staroscik said he left the riding instructions with Anderson. "He's ridden her in four previous wins so I just told him to use his own judgment," he noted.

Elks Test Next

Ajic Jay hopefully will be able to increase her distance running, the trainer said. Her next assignment will be the Elks Handicap on April 3. That's a 6½-furlong chase for 3-year-olds with a $6,000-added purse.

Ajic Jay stopped second-favorite Bob's Decision by one length while Bob's Decision was 1½-lengths better than Corn Sprout, who was third.

In fact, the first six horses finished within five lengths of each other — a fact which pleased Fonner racing secretary Dean Williams.

"You bet, I'm pleased it was that close," said Williams, who assigned the weights. "We've had older, cheaper claiming races with real close finishes, but this was very close for a handicap race."

Another happy person at Fonner was general manager Al Swihart, who saw three mutuel records shattered in the best day Fonner has experienced in 23 years.

The total mutuel handle of $667,292 eclipsed the previous best day ($639,664 on April 5, 1975) by $27,628.

The daily double handle of $66,814 topped the former mark of $65,818 (set on April 5, 1975) and the combined handle of the sixth race and exacta ($97,814) was also a record, surpassing the former mark of $92,042 on April 19, 1973.

The handle on the Baxter Handicap of $72,496 was just $1,772 short of the one-race record of $74,268.

Perhaps the one-near-record most obvious Saturday was the crowd of 9,202 just 15 short of the one-day attendance mark of 9,217 set on March 21, 1970.

That's just about the limit of Fonner's grandstand. With temperatures in the 40s and the wind blowing generously, most patrons were inside causing congestion and making it difficult to get to the mutuel windows.

That problem has already started Swihart thinking about expansion. He admitted that several architects have been consulted about the feasible expansion plans for Fonner.

The clubhouse definitely will be expanded next year, although the additional amount of room still has not been determined.

Another possibility is to add windows and perhaps tables behind the top row of the grandstand, which would give Fonner three betting levels.

Regardless, it's a problem that most general managers would relish. It's just another chapter in the phenomenal growth of Fonner Park under the leadership of Al Swihart and his assistant, Hugh Miner.

Kentucky's Larry Johnson (12) and Melvin Watkins of North Carolina-Charlotte fell to the court Sunday as they battle for control of the basketball during NIT finals in New York City. Kentucky won, 71-67.

Kentucky Helped To NIT Win

NEW YORK (AP) — The Kentucky Wildcats won their first National Invitation Tournament championship since 1946—but they needed help to do it.

First the North Carolina-Charlotte coach helped them, then the North Carolina-Charlotte team—and the result was an exciting 71-67 victory Sunday in the final at Madison Square Garden.

With North Carolina-Charlotte holding a seven-point lead at 54-47 and 10:11 left in the game, Coach Lee Rose order his 49ers to go into a slow-down, while Kentucky's entire front court was sitting on the bench in foul trouble.

"When they started backing off," said Kentucky Coach Joe Hall, "that was just fine with us. We appreciated that."

Mike Phillips, Jack Givens and James Lee—all of them saddled with four fouls—were then inserted into the lineup late in the game to help trigger a Kentucky rally. Phillips was the big man for the Wildcats, with five points in the last minute including a tip-in with nine seconds left that locked up the championship.

"Phillips' big play at the end was a super effort and we really needed it," said Hall. "The big thing about this team is that for the last 10 games they have simply refused to be beaten. I had all the confidence in the world that we were going to win this one."

Hall might have had all the confidence but nobody really knew who was going to win the game until the final minute. The 49ers committed two key turnovers at the end to help the Wildcats nail down the title.

The NIT's 39th championship game wasn't decided before Phillips took over with three foul shots and a field goal.

The teams were never more than seven points apart in the wild second half before the game changed in Kentucky's favor with 1:06 remaining. Before the Wildcats took charge, Cedrick Maxwell scored two of his game-leading 24 points with 1:30 remaining, while the crowd of 12,415, most of it North Carolina-Charlotte rooters, cheered the 49ers on.

Reggie Warford, who had kept Kentucky in the game in the second half with 10 points, fired in a bomb with 1:07 left to provide the Wildcats with the go-ahead points at 64-63.

Phillips, Kentucky's 6-foot-10, 230-pound center, who was a first-half force with 10 points, then sank two free throws at 1:06 to provide the Wildcats 66-63 lead. Phillips was fouled on the Warford shot.

The 49ers, a Cinderella team in this tournament with two upset victories in previous games, had a chance to pull closer to Kentucky, but Kevin King threw the ball away while the 49ers were working for a shot and the Wildcats took over possession with 46 seconds remaining.

Melvin Watkins stole the ball from Kentucky but walked, giving the Wildcats another key turnover in the last minute.

Chatty Green Quiet On Win In Jacksonville

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Hubert Green, a talkative guy who's rarely at a loss for words, chatted almost constantly with his big gallery on his way to a gritty, rallying, two-under-par 70 that staked him to his second consecutive victory Sunday in the Greater Jacksonville Open Golf Tournament.

He traded jokes with his neighbors from Bay Point, Fla., and one-liners with old college friends from Florida State and an occasional smile with wife Judi, lugging young Myatt Green around the course that winds through pines and lakes.

But he looked just a little startled when asked for a comment about his rare sweep of two tournaments in a row.

"I don't know," Hubert said. "I don't know how I feel. I've never done it before. Gratified, I guess. It hasn't been done all that often. I'm very pleased about it."

Green, a run-away, record-setting winner of the Doral Open a week ago and a man rapidly advancing through the ranks of the game's premier performers, claimed his second Jacksonville Open title in three years with a 276 total, a two-stroke margin and 12 under par on the deceptively-tough, 7,143 yard Deerwood Club course.

Green, a one-stroke leader when the day's play started under threatening skies, sent a jolt of apprehension through his big gallery that included wife Judi and a large contingent of friends and neighbors from his home in Bay Point, Fla., when he hit into a bunker and later three-putted for a double bogey five on the third hole.

It dropped him out of sole possession of the top spot.

But Hubert, a dark-haired, quick-talking 29-year-old, shrugged it off with a birdie on the next hole, moved two strokes ahead at the turn and all but clinched it with a duece on the 11th.

The victory, the 10th in five seasons for Green, was worth $35,000 from the total purse of $175,000 and lifted him into fourth place—and ahead of the absent Jack Nicklaus and Johnny Miller—on the season's money-winning list with $89,006.

It also allowed him to join Miller, Hale Irwin and Ben Crenshaw as the year's double winners and stamped him a more-than-serious contender in the Masters, the first of the year's major championships, only three weeks away.

Hubert, who failed on his first attempt to gain his playing rights on the tour, now needs only a victory in one of the Big Four to solidify his position as one of golf's premier performers.

"You're not a great player, in my estimation, until you've won one or more of the majors," said Hubert, as usual dressed in his trademark green ensemble.

Veteran Miller Barber took second in this one with a final 71 and a 278 total. Ed Dougherty birdied his final three holes for a 67 that lifted him into a tie for third with Mike Hill at 279. Hill shot a closing 71.

U.S. Open champion Lou Graham was next at 71-280, followed by South African Gary Player at 281. Player shot 70.

Green played most of the back nine with a comfortable, three-stroke margin, but faltered just briefly at the end.

Barber, playing in front of Green, birdied the 16th to cut the margin to two. Moments later Hubert three-putted the 17th and suddenly had but a single stroke in hand.

Green wasn't nervous at all.

The skinny guy calmly lashed the ball from the sand to within 18 inches of the cup—an absolutely remarkable bunker shot—and tapped in the unneeded birdie putt.

Big Ten Cagers Get New Name: 'Big 2 — Little 8'

By United Press International

The term "Big Two, Little Eight" is no longer the exclusive property of the Big Ten in the description of its football fortunes.

The calling card can also be attached to the Big Ten's basketball efforts, now that surprising Michigan has joined not so surprising Indiana in the final four of the NCAA tournament.

And you can bet the roundball "Big Two" will carry the conference's pride a bit farther than the other "Big Two" did in postseason football adventures.

Michigan, runnerup to undefeated Indiana during the Big Ten's regular season despite winning 14-of-18 games, toppled Big Eight champion Missouri, 95-88, Saturday to win the Midwest regional. Indiana, the No. 1 ranked team all season, methodically mowed down No. 2 ranked Marquette 65-56 to win the Mideast regional.

The other two NCAA semifinal berths went to defending champion UCLA, an 82-66 victor over Arizona in the West regional, and third-ranked Rutgers, a 91-75 winner over VMI in the East regional.

The four survivors will gather this weekend in Philadelphia, with the two semifinal games Saturday and the championship game Monday night.

Michigan could not match Missouri guard Willie Smith but the Tigers did not posess the overall bench to match the Wolverines. And one man does not a team, nor champion, make.

Smith scored 43 points but was neutralized late in the game by reserve guard Dave Baxter, a defensive move by Coach Johnny Orr which enabled Michigan to gain the final four for the first time since 1965 when the Cazzie Russell-led Wolverines fell to UCLA in the title game, 91-80.

Baxter held Smith to one basket in the final five minutes and finished with 18 points of his own.

"I'm just not used to losing; never have been," said Smith. "We could have gone either way, but I can't take anything away from them, they're a great team."

Indiana's victory may have cost the NCAA one of its most colorful characters —Marquette Coach Al McGuire—who was called for two technical fouls in the game and afterwards claimed he was through forever with tournament play.

"I won't come to any more tournaments," said McGuire in an emotional press conference after the loss. "I personally feel I'm affecting my team's play in tournaments.

"If we make a tournament while I'm still around I will let my assistants handle it. I didn't tell the team this. They will probably read this in the newspapers.

"Maybe I'm paranoid. If I am, I'm making everyone else around me paranoid. You get a hangup and you push too hard and you try too hard."

All-America forward Richard Washington scored 22 points to help UCLA beat Arizona and set up a rematch with Indiana. The Bruins opened the regular season last November against the Hoosiers but finished a 20-point loser, 84-64.

"I'm looking forward to playing Indiana," Bartow said. "I know they're a super team with a super coach. But if we play the way we have in some of our last games, we can play with any college team in the country. And, after all, Indiana is a college team.

Veterans Raise Wesleyan Hopes

By KEN HAMBLETON
State College Writer

Nebraska Wesleyan baseball coach Ron Bachman only needs to hope for one thing this year to make the season successful. Good Weather.

The Plainsmen return their top four pitchers and an all veteran infield and outfield, besides picking up some top freshman prospects. "Potentially, we have the talent to be the best NWU team ever," said Bachman. "We have solid pitching, good defense and strong power."

NWU is 3-7 but the losses include two one-run losses to Oklahoma Christian, and two to Oklahoma City and Northwest Missouri State. All three are considered baseball powers, with NW Missouri placing fifth in the NCAA Division II last year and Oklahoma City gaining a winning record in Division I last year.

The Plainsmen open their home slate Wednesday at 1 p.m. at Sherman Field in a rematch with Northwest Missouri State.

"I've always said I'd rather lose to a good team than beat a poor team," said Bachman. "And, with a tough schedule early in the season, we expect to sharpen up for our conference schedule."

The Plainsmen boast a 40-game schedule, all doubleheaders, with home-and-home twin bills against all the Nebraska Inter-collegiate Athletic Conference teams.

"The only area team we're missing from our schedule is Nebraska," said Bachman.

Bachman said he is glad he has all his pitchers back this year because of the schedule. "You schedule a lot of games and hope that not more than 10 get rained out. But if we end up playing all the rest of our scheduled games, we're going to need good pitching."

Lefthander Larry Abel, a senior from Central City who holds NWU records for most wins and earned run average, leads the mound staff. "He had an ERA under two before we lost to Northwest Missouri State Saturday," said Bachman. "He's primarily a fastball pitcher but has a good breaking pitch and a good change up."

Seniors Mike Ginn and Larry Abel, both righthanders, and Dan Klaus, who will join the team after working for a state senator with sophomore Ted Hall fill out the starting rotation.

"Ginn is a good heady pitcher and Ball has the record for most saves," said Bachman, "and both are good control pitchers."

A veteran infield of shortstop Scott Votava, third baseman Jim Hammersky, first baseman Byron Stallworth and catcher Gene Lessman give Bachman hopes of a fourth straight conference title this year.

Stallworth and Votava were the top two base stealers on last year's team, with Stallworth successful on all 20 attempts. Hammersky was last year's leading hitter with a .371 average.

"Second base was kind of a problem spot for us," said Bachman. "But Doug Neill, a freshman from Lincoln Northeast, and Gerry Seitz are filling in adequately for us."

Leftfielder Bob Blake, a .356 hitter last year with five home runs, centerfielder Mike Reta and freshman rightfielder Doug Votava anchor the outfield for the Plainsmen.

"Blake has a lot of speed for a 200-pounder and he's our power hitter," said Bachman. "He hit a 400-foot homer at Oklahoma City this year and has shown well as our clean-up hitter."

Another former Rocket, Bruce Reed, fills the designated hitter spot. "He was the best hitter in Lincoln last year in high school," said Bachman. Reed also has homered and accounted for two doubles.

Sharpe Sets Six Records In Meet

By RYLY JANE HAMBLETON
Star Sports Writer

Just for fun, Chuck Sharpe entered the Great Plains indoor swimming championships this weekend and won seven events, setting records in six of them.

It wasn't all for fun, but his coach, Cal Bentz of the Omaha Westside Swim Club, said Sharpe entered a lot of different events because it was interesting to try to improve his times.

"Chuck is really working on his freestyle for the nationals," Bentz said. "He swam better in the individual medley and in the butterfly than he ever has."

Sharpe broke records in both the 400 individual medley and the 100 butterfly Sunday, and on Saturday, he erased one of the oldest Great Plains records in the 200 butterfly.

During the three-day meet, 39 Great Plains marks fell. Just one time turned in was good enough to qualify for the national AAU meet. JoDea Eckstrom was clocked in 2:11.68 in the 200 individual medley, giving her a chance to compete at Long Beach at the nationals.

Sharpe will be competing in the 200- and 400-meter freestyle in Long Beach, while Barb Harris of the Lincoln Swim Club will swim in the 100 and 200 freestyle and the 100 butterfly.

But Sharpe wasn't the only swimmer with multiple records.

Catherine Anderson, of Clarksdale, Miss., garnered six first places and set four records.

"We promised her we'd go to a meet out of state, and we missed one in Cincinnati a few weeks ago, so here we are," said Anderson's mother, Mrs. W. K. Anderson Jr. "She always swims in the southeastern AAU and wanted some competition out of the region."

Anderson is a member of the Memphis State University age group swim club and travels 80 miles to MSU twice a week to work out. The rest of the time, Anderson works out in a pool in the back yard, clocking herself and following guidelines that were set up by her coach, Dick Badger.

She has had times in the top 10 rankings for age groups in the 100 individual medley and the 200 freestyle.

In closing ceremonies, the Omaha Westside Swim Club won the team trophy with 782 points. The Lincoln Swim Club got the runners-up trophy with a 572 total.

High-point trophies were given in each age group. Martha Timm of LSC won the eight-and-under girls' trophy with five wins and a second. Anderson collected the 10-and-under trophy; Julie Green of the Bellevue Swim Club took the 11-12 prize with four wins; and Carrie Goode won the girls' 13-14 trophy with four firsts.

In the senior division, Barb Harris and Melanie Jakob tied for the honor. Harris, of LSC, won four events, while Jakob, who was swimming independently, won two.

In the boys' division, Craig Oppel of the Ralston Swim Club took the eight-and-under trophy with five wins; David Lammel won the 10-and-under trophy with three wins; Pat Whyatt of the Sooner Swim Club in Norman, Okla., took the 11-12 honor with four wins; Ty Rickard of OWSC won the 13-14 trophy with three wins; and Sharpe won the senior division trophy.

Israel Seeks End To Arab Rioting

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's supreme court on Sunday upheld a police ban against Jewish prayers on Temple Mount in a dispute that has touched off the worst rioting in Jordan's West Bank since it was occupied by Israel in the 1967 war.

In other moves to try to end the disturbances, the Israeli army ordered troops out of the West Bank town of Hebron, barred a rabbi from Hebron for allegedly sparking riots there last week, and closed for 14 days a Palestinian newspaper in Arab Jerusalem that had called for continued demonstrations.

The actions came on the eve of a U.N. Security Council meeting to consider Moslem charges that Israel is trying to wrest Temple Mount and other religious sites from Islamic authority.

Israel, which had followed a policy of boycotting any meeting where the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) was represented, has announced it will attend the debate even though the PLO also will be present.

A pre-Christian Jewish temple once stood on Temple Mount, and two mosques are located there now, making it hallowed to both Jews and Moslems.

The West Bank rioting erupted six weeks ago after a Jerusalem magistrate ruled that Jews could pray on the mount. Police continued the ban on Jewish prayers despite the verdict and the three-judge supreme court backed them, saying authorities can determine who may worship at a holy site if public order is involved.

Closed for two weeks by Israeli military censors was the newspaper A-Shaab. The paper, with a circulation of 10,000, is the largest Arabic language newspaper in Jerusalem.

It had carried a PLO article appealing to "all forces, official and unofficial, to help the rising of the Palestinian people in the occupied territories." Last month A-Shaab was closed for eight days for allegedly violating Israeli censorship rules.

Defense Minister Shimon Peres ordered the withdrawal of Israeli troops from Hebron after meeting with the city's Arab mayor, Sheikh Ali Ja'abri. Ja'abri said Saturday he was resigning because Israeli soldiers who were pursuing rioters invaded City Hall. He did not say after meeting Peres if he planned to retract the resignation.

The military government banned Rabbi Moshe Levinger, firebrand leader of 1,400 Jews living in a compound near Hebron, from entering the Arab town. Last week Rabbi Levinger and some of the Jewish settlers in Hebron intervened in army efforts to quell riots, and Levinger ordered his men to fire at demonstrators' legs if necessary, the military officials charged.

'Handshaker' To Make Educators' Jobs Easier

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln Public Schools officials have uncrated a computer that Marvin M. Miller says will "do the handshaking" between school building terminals and the heart of the system.

That handshaker is a PDP 11/70, a Digital Equipment Corp. machine that's "just the beginning" of a plan to make educators' jobs easier, said Miller, data processing supervisor.

"One of the main goals the district has set is to have terminals in every school building by sometime during the next school year."

During the current academic year, Miller said, "we hope to put terminals in maybe up to 10 buildings" for pilot testing, debugging and development. "It should be a very simple matter then to expand those programs" districtwide.

It'll Have Three Duties

The new handshaking machine will have three main duties initially, Miller said: sending routine information between school terminals and central data files, filling teacher orders for media items and aiding the System I reading program.

In the communicating function, the PDP will allow a building principal in his school to send an electronic request for a student's date of birth or home address, for example. The handshaker will introduce the request to the main computer, which will send the information to a printout in front of the principal.

Related administrative uses include checking for accuracy of account numbers or equipment inventories.

If teachers now want a particular film to show a class, they must send a written request through school mail. It gets processed at the media center, then goes to the computer center, where it's checked against an inventory file.

But those teachers might not learn until the day before they need it that the film's not available, Miller said, noting resulting scheduling problems.

Now It'll Be Seconds

The new computer will have teachers follow the same process except that they'll step up to their building terminal, request the film "and in a matter of seconds" learn if they can use it when they want, Miller said.

If it's already booked, teachers can follow the same procedure for alternates.

To streamline the System I reading program, the PDP works this way: A teacher sends via the terminal a student's test results covering specific objectives. If certain material hasn't been mastered, "the computer will look through some files pre-established by teachers and an appropriate set of instructions will be printed out to the student," Miller said.

Instructions May Vary

The instructions, for example, could include a list of exercises in a particular book, could suggest listening to a tape recording, or reading part of a specific book.

Sending the printout back to the building takes "a short period of time, so the student can continue work," he said.

The district's electronic transformation began in 1966 and in May 1974 moved into its modern computer plan by buying the first major piece of a five-year $1 million project.

British Press Raps Princess's Conduct

London (UPI) — Britain's newspapers took off the gloves Sunday for a bout of public criticism of Princess Margaret of a kind rarely directed at the royal family.

One spoke of "Princess Margaret's young lover" and said "her new romance" was responsible for the break up of her 16-year marriage to Lord Snowdon, the former Anthony-Armstrong Jones.

The queen's sister and her photographer husband announced their separation Friday. The Observer newspaper said the couple's close friends assume the separation "to be only the first stage in an orderly progress towards divorce" in two years' time.

Direct public criticism of any member of the royal family is most unusual in Britain. Newspapers and magazines criticize, if at all, by innuendo or indirection or by citing monarcy baiters like Member of Parliament Willie Hamilton.

But restraints dissolved Sunday in the wake of the separation announcement. Sunday newspapers were almost unanimously critical.

"The public has the right to question whether Princess Margaret is setting the sort of example that is expected from British royalty," said the Sunday People in an editorial which occupied its entire front page.

"If her private life isn't going to measure up to the royal standard, wouldn't she be well advised to withdraw entirely from the royal family business?" it asked.

The Sunday Mirror said that at 45, "Margaret will have to make it abundantly clear to everyone that she is not only ready but willing to turn her back on the frivolous, often bordering on irresponsible, social set which has fascinated her for so long."

"Does she really imagine that from now on she will help the royal image?" asked a columnist in the Sunday Express.

"Especially if young Mr. Roddy Llewellyn, in jeans and sweatshirt, ends up, hands clasped behind his back, walking the statutory five paces behind?"

The News of the World, in a copyright dispatch, pinned the "lover" tag on Llewellyn, 28. It said the princess calls him "my darling angel" and that their love had transformed their lives.

The newspaper also cited their vacations on the Caribbean Island of Mustique and Margaret's visits to Llewellyn's uppercrust "commune" in the English countryside.

"Perhaps most impetuous of all," the News of the World said, "Roddy made overnight visits to Margaret's home, Kensington Palace."

Gauger To Introduce Citizens' Street Plan

County Commissioner Jan Gauger agreed Sunday to introduce at the next Officials Committee meeting a plan for widening Fremont Street drafted by the Fremont Citizens Neighborhood Organization.

Mrs. Gauger, who is chairman of the Officials Committee, said she has no reason for not supporting the proposal now but will consult with county officials before deciding whether to support as well as introduce it.

County Commissioner Bruce Hamilton, who also attended the Sunday meeting between Mrs. Gauger, the Fremont Neighborhood Organization and the Lincoln Alliance, said he would give the proposal his unqualified support.

The proposal states that Fremont shall be designated a two-lane 38-foot-wide arterial from 48th to 70th, with only one parking lane and no less than two lights per block, and that adequate storm sewers shall be installed.

The Officials Committee had recommended that Fremont be widened to four lanes with concrete medians from 48th to 56th, and to two lanes from 56th until 70th.

The City Council held a hearing two weeks ago on the project and is expected to reach a decision within a few weeks.

BEEP Is A Winner For Northwest Lincoln Group

The Northwest Lincoln Community Association is the first winner of the Energy Action Award Program.

The award is given by the Mayor's Energy Action Committee, formed last week by Mayor Helen Boosalis.

Criteria for the award are: the program or project must be innovative and educational, responsive to the needs of the community, use energy efficiently and be in use.

The Northwest Lincoln Community Association will receive the award for its Belmont Energy Efficiency Project. BEEP informed residents of rooftop heat loss indicated by Cengas Thermograms, and installed insulation in nearly 60 northwest area homes.

Approximately $6,700 worth of insulation was bought by the community association and resold at a reasonable price to area residents, association president Vern Pejowski said.

Volunteers publicized the project and helped install the insulation. They included students from Goodrich Junior High and Lincoln High, along with groups from the Boy and Girl Scouts and Campfire Girls.

Hand Tools, Parts Worth $800 Stolen

A Lincoln man has reported the theft of more than $500 worth of hand tools and a tool box and $300 worth of diesel engine parts from a pickup parked at his residence Friday or Saturday.

Police said that John Rethwisch reported the items were taken from the truck owned by Lincoln Equipment Co., while it was parked at 2600 S. 58th St.

ASPEN, Colo. (UPI) — Two-time World Pro skiing champion Vladimir "Spider" Sabich was shot and killed Sunday night, authorities said.

Police refused to say whether any arrests were made but sources said Sabich's girl friend, singer Claudine Longet may be a suspect.

Sabich, 31, won the World Pro Ski crown for the 1970-71 and 71-72 seasons. He had been inactive since suffering a vertabrae fracture in the last race of the 1973 season.

Sabich, who started his amateur skiing career at Colorado University, finished fifth in the 1968 Winter Olympics at Grenoble.

NBA Officials Confirm Salary Pooling

NEW YORK (AP) — Several team officials from the National Basketball Association confirmed the previous existence of a pooling arrangement to pay for the league's top stars. But one NBA official charged that the American Basketball Association has engaged in the same practice.

And if that charge is substantiated, it could jeopardize the ABA's antitrust suit against the NBA, legal sources said.

William Alverson, president of the Milwaukee Bucks, confirmed on Sunday a New York Times story, which said that all the NBA teams were contributing part of the big-dollar salaries of such superstars as Rick Barry, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Elvin Hayes. The Times said the practice began in 1968 and continued for at least five years.

"It was done with something like one player per team, not just four or five in the league," said Alverson. "We pooled the total salaries, and clubs either got money back or sent the net to the league office to even things up.

"It ended in 1971," Alverson said. "We cut it out because the ABA claimed in a lawsuit that it was hurting them. Since then, the ABA has been doing exactly the same thing, after complaining about it."

Franklin Mieuli, owner of the Golden State Warriors, said, however, that the practice lasted until the 1973 season. He said that part of Barry's annual salary was paid by the other NBA teams after Barry returned to the NBA in 1972, but that the NBA hasn't shared in those payments in the last two years.

The lawsuit, the ABA's antitrust action against the NBA, is scheduled to go to trial June 1 in federal court here. The information for the Times article came from documents on file for that case.

A spokesman for the ABA said he could not comment on Alverson's charge because of fear of prejudicing the upcoming case. Jim Bindley, general manager of the ABA's Indiana Pacers, also refused comment because of the lawsuit but added: "I've only been general manager since November, but to my knowledge there hasn't been poolings in the ABA."

However, the Times said while there is no direct evidence that the ABA had a similar share-the-salary agreement, documents on file in federal court in New York "make clear that some ABA teams got reductions in their league assessments for signing such stars as Julius Erving (New York) and David Thompson (Denver)."

Roy Boe, owner of the New York Nets, refused comment and Carl Scheer, owner of the Denver Nuggets, was unavailable for comment.

An ABA source confirmed that the practice of reducing league assessments exists but he did not know of any pooling arrangement to pay salaries.

In the ABA's upcoming antitrust case, whether the league did or did not pool salaries becomes legally significant because of "the clean hands doctrine."

Basically, a party can't seek damages for a violation if it has engaged in the same illegal practice, legal sources said.

The ABA may allege that the NBA's pooling practice was an illegal restraint of trade, but if the ABA committed the same restraint, it would not be able to claim damages, one lawyer said. The reduced assessments for signing Erving and Thompson might or might not be the equivalent of the NBA's pooling practice, he added.

Another lawyer said the theory could be argued that what "is illegal for the big guy in an antitrust action may not be illegal for the little guy."

In any case, the ABA could claim that its survival was at stake, one lawyer said, and it had to act because of what the NBA had done before. "The ABA could say it was more unreasonable for them to act so we should still get damages."

However, the ABA suit is generally regarded as an attempt to force a merger with the NBA.

In separate interviews, NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien and ABA Commissioner Dave DeBusschere were asked about merger and the antitrust case.

"Merger discussions are so premature as to jeopardize our current posture in the courts," O'Brien said.

DeBusschere said the settlement of the antitrust case could be part of over-all merger discussions.

"I think merger is in the best interests of professional basketball," DeBusschere said. "What we have to face up to is what's best for the industry itself."

NEXT WEEK WITH

THE OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC

MARCH 22-28, 1976

See the school boy, chasing his hat.

Spread manure over these late snows on your garden (the melting snow will carry the goodness of it into the soil). Third quarter of the moon March 22. Woodchucks emerge now and begin to mate. Average length of days for the week: 12 hours, 24 minutes. Americans now spend $800,000,000 on hot dogs annually. Sixty-foot waves delay Queen Mary's U.S. arrival March 22, 1959. [illegible] ahead trying to get even.

Old Farmer's Riddle: Who were the shortest and tallest Presidents? (Answer below.)

Ask the Old Farmer: I am not very superstitious about walking under ladders, black cats crossing my path, knocking on wood, etc. But I must say Friday the 13th bothers me. Can you tell me how this superstition came about? S.K., Albany, N.Y.

[illegible]

Home Hints: [illegible] Riddle answer: James Madison was 5'4" short; Abraham Lincoln was 6'4" tall.

OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECASTS

Central Great Plains: First part of week rains in central and south, mixed with snow in northeast; then colder, sunny and cold latter part with flurries in north and showers in south.

Floods Kill 12 In South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Heavy floods spawned by torrential rains left at least 12 persons dead in a suburb of the South African port city of Durban, and the eventual death toll may be much higher, officials said Sunday.

Another 1,500 persons have been evacuated from their homes in the Springfield area of Durban. Many of the homes were completely submerged after the Umgeni River overflowed its banks following torrential rain Saturday and Sunday.

Helicopters being used in the rescue operation have managed to lift 72 people to safety so far.

Lodge News — The "Sunday Journal and Star" has it.

Italian Ski Racer Prevails

MONT STE. ANNE, Que. (UPI) — Italian Franco Bieler upset World Cup champion Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden Sunday in a dual slalom race, the last on the World Cup circuit this year.

The 25-year-old Italian easily won the first heat by 1.256 seconds before the 20-year-old Stenmark took the second run by 0.962 seconds to finish just 0.294 behind Bieler for the two runs.

Canadian Jim Hunter of Calgary, was third and another Italian, Fausto Radici, fourth.

The win for Bieler was his first on the World Cup circuit, although the dual slalom here—the only parallel race of the season—didn't count for individual World Cup points.

The race did count toward the Nations' Cup, however, but had no bearing on those final standings, which Austria wrapped up on Friday.

Despite rain and above freezing temperatures, the racers said they had good conditions for their runs through the 24 gates on the 290-meter (1,157 foot) course with a verticle drop of 90 meters (359 feet).

In getting to the finals, Bieler took a bye into the second round and then defeated American Steve Mahre, of White Pass, Wash., and two fellow Italians—Gustavo Thoeni and Radici—to set up the finals against Stenmark in the elimination event.

Stenmark's road to the finals saw wins over Canadian Dave Murray of Abbotsford, B.C., Austrian Anton Steiner, Peter Luescher of Switzerland and Hunter.

NU Golfers To Visit Texas

Larry Romjue's Nebraska golf squad travels to Galveston, Tex. to compete Tuesday through Friday in the Galveston Island Invitational.

The tournament will be a 72-hole affair, attracting such schools as Iowa State, Wisconsin and Wichita State.

Two weeks ago, the Huskers placed sixth at the Menger Hotel Intercollegiate Golf Classic, and Romjue hopes his team can perform better at Galveston.

"I was not really that happy with how we performed," he said. "Although freshman Tony Pesavento and sophomore Doug Smith played well, as a team there was room for improvement."

Nebraska Lineup

1. Doug Smith
2. Tony Pesavento
3. Craig Moyer
4. Steve Statton
5. Dave Donachie
6. Todd Thorson

14 Jailed At Idaho 'Fish-In'

SALMON, Idaho (AP) — Fourteen men were jailed over the weekend as wildlife officials and police cracked down on a "fish-in" by more than 250 persons protesting a ban on fishing in the Salmon River.

Most of the men arrested, including those a magistrate described as some of Salmon's "most-upstanding citizens," refused to sign citations for illegal fishing from the icy banks of the river near North Fork, 22 miles north of here. All pleaded innocent and were released after arraignment Saturday.

Several fisherman carried placards protesting closing of the river, also known as "River of No Return," by the Idaho Fish and Game Department which said the action would protect dwindling populations of salmon and steelhead trout.

The anglers claim there are enough fish to allow upstream sport fishing.

New Tires Aid Pearson's Victory

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — "Benny should have taken on all four tires," said David Pearson of the critical last pit stop that helped him beat Benny Parsons in Sunday's 17th annual Atlanta 500 stock car race.

"We put on four new tires and it really seemed to help," said Pearson, who fought back among the leaders after losing a lap with tire trouble earlier.

Parsons led Pearson when the two leaders made their final stop for fuel and tires during a caution period with about 50 miles left. Pearson's Mercury got new tires all the way around, while Parsons' Chevrolet took on only two outside tires.

Pearson agreed that, all things being equal, Parsons might have been able to hold on for victory.

"My car had a real bad vibration," explained Pearson, winner of three of this season's first seven NASCAR Grand National races. "I had to drive as hard as I ever have to keep up.

"If you don't believe me, just look at the blisters on my hands."

Parsons, of course, was disappointed with second place.

"Anytime you're overjoyed at finishing second, it is time to hang it up in this sport," he said glumly. "When David dropped off the pace before that last stop, I began to think that I might have a chance to win the race.

"Then he comes back stronger than ever and I knew I could forget about Victory Lane unless his car developed trouble. It's tough to sit there and know you can't win even though you're so close."

Parsons, leading the NASCAR Grand National points standings, was one of the few of the original group of leaders not to encounter problems during the four hour race.

Pearson lost a lap with tire troubles early in the race, but managed to make it up during caution periods and with the usual speedy work of his Wood brothers crew.

Third place Cale Yarborough, with his Chevrolet clearly the fastest car on the track, lost four laps midway through the race to change a broken distributor rotor. He managed to make up all but one circuit around the 1.522-mile Atlanta International Raceway oval.

Lennie Pond came in fourth, another lap back, with a smashed-up rear end on his Chevrolet—the result of a tangle with Bob Burcham late in the race.

Fifth place Darrell Waltrip nearly lost the hood on his Chevrolet early on, when the support brackets gave out. A long stop to tape up the problem was responsible for part of the three laps he finished behind.

Pole position starter Dave Marcis lost an engine in his Dodge early in the race.

NAIA Cites State Trio

Kansas City, Mo. (UPI) — Three Nebraska small college basketball players have received honorable mention in the 1976 NAIA all-America basketball selections.

They were Joe Wharton, Doane College, Paul Bergman, Hastings College and Rick Anderson, Wayne State.

Steve Williams of Dana College finished fifth in individual free throw shooting with a .897 accuracy mark.

Ashe Halts Borg, 7-6, 6-3

KEAUHOU-KONA, Hawaii (UPI) — Arthur Ashe handed Bjorn Borg his first defeat in the World Championship Challenge Cup series, 6-4, 7-6, 6-3, Sunday in a $10,000 winner-take-all match that was marred by controversial line calls.

The victory was the second in a row for Ashe, while Borg dropped his first match in three decisions.

Most of the controversial calls went against Borg and the Swedish teenager let it bother him to the point that after losing the second set, it appeared he did not play with the same intensity and all but gave up.

The most controversial call came on the last point of the 12th game in the second set with Borg leading in games, 6-5. The game went to deuce when Ashe hit a forehand down the line and the ball was called good but many people in the crowd, and Borg, thought it was out. Borg even walked to the spot and circled with his racket where the ball appeared to him to go out. Ashe went on to win the game and tie the set at 6-all.

Though the crowd tried to encourage him, Borg appeared let down. Ashe went on to win the tie-breaker 7-3.

Runaway Plane Kills Woman, 51

Hot Springs, Ark. (UPI) — Joyce Arvington, who didn't know enough about airplanes to turn on the cockpit radio, died Sunday in an attempt to stop a runaway, pilotless aircraft.

Officials said Mrs. Arvington, 51, of Wichita, Kan., was killed when the single-engine private plane crashed after an 18-minute pilotless flight.

Pilot Jack Delhotal, 53, of Wichita, was stranded on the ground when the plane took off without him.

Airport manager Ralph Disheroon said the starter on Delhotal's Cessna 210 was not working so he climbed out of the cabin and tried to start the engine by manually spinning the propeller.

The engine started and the plane sped down the runway before Delhotal could get back inside. It lifted off the ground with Mrs. Arvington aboard.

"A plane will fly by itself. It will take off if it's moving fast enough," Disheroon said.

Mrs. Arvington "knew nothing about flying a plane. She couldn't even turn the radio on," Disheroon said. Efforts to "talk the woman down" didn't work because the radio wasn't on, he said.

Disheroon said the aircraft crashed after Mrs. Arvington apparently pulled the key out of the ignition in an attempt to cut off the engine.

Harris Aide: Campaign In 'Best Shape'

A national campaign aide to Fred Harris said that despite poor showings in early Democratic presidential primaries, "the Harris campaign is in the best shape to date — Fred is in the election to stay."

Bert DeLieu, Harris' state campaign coordinator, told workers at a strategy session that he bases this assessment on two facts: a decision by Harris last week to change his national strategy and focus instead on a few key primary states, and because popular recording stars are beginning concert tours for Fred Harris.

DeLieu said the Harris campaign will mount "a carefully planned, effective and competitive drive" in the April 27 Pennsylvania primary, and expects to spend several hundred thousand dollars.

A strong showing in Pennsylvania will give the Harris campaign momentum into the May primaries, he said.

The May 11 Nebraska primary will be important to the Harris campaign "because of Fred's emphasis on family farm and soil resources legislation," DeLieu said.

Stereo Gear Stolen At Lincoln Church

The theft of more than $600 worth of stereo equipment from a Lincoln church sometime Saturday is being investigated by Lincoln police.

Police said that a stereo phonograph, tape recorder, amplifier and two microphones were taken from the First Presbyterian Church at 17th and G.

Bulbs, Lenses Taken From Public Airport

Officials at Lincoln Municipal Airport told police that someone stole more than $500 worth of bulbs and lenses from runway lights at the airport sometime Saturday.

Taken from runway 17 left were six lenses, 19 blue colored taxiway lenses and 15 lightbulbs, police said.

Jurors Acquit Proprietors Of Adult Bookstore

North Platte (UPI) — Larry and Beverly Schwartz of Maxwell, owners of the Be-Lar Adult Bookstore in North Platte, have been found innocent of selling obscene materials.

A Lincoln County Court jury of four women and two men, who were sequestered during the trial, returned the innocent verdicts Saturday. The jury received the case Friday and deliberated about eight hours over two days.

The Schwartzes were each charged with the sale, possession with intent to sell and promotion of obscene material.

During final arguments Friday, Lincoln County Atty. Milton Larson told the jury, "You are the determiners of community standards . . . In the hands of the defendants the material was not intended for educational or therapeutical value."

Larson referred to testimony from Dr. James Cole, a University of Nebraska professor of psychology and human sexuality, who testified for the defense concerning a 13-minute film. The state had shown the film in court as evidence.

Police officer Mike Swain had testified he bought the film at the bookstore from Beverly Schwartz Feb. 14.

Omaha Woman Dies In Crash

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa (AP)—An Omaha woman died in a Council Bluffs hospital Sunday night of injuries suffered in a car-truck collision Friday night.

The victim was Jean Jones, 36, a passenger in a car driven by Harold Iske, 37, of Omaha.

Council Bluffs authorities said the Iske car, going east, collided with a west-bound truck on Highway 275 in the south part of Council Bluffs.

Officers said the truck driven by Duke Collins, 52, of Hazelwood, Mo., was attempting a left turn.

Collins escaped injury. Iske was reported in good condition at a Council Bluffs Hospital. Another passenger in the car, Tim Curtis, 27, of Omaha, was listed in good condition and Sandra Lewis, 36, of Omaha, also in the auto, was reported in fair condition.

Israel Seeks End To Arab Rioting

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's supreme court on Sunday upheld a police ban against Jewish prayers on Temple Mount in a dispute that has touched off the worst rioting in Jordan's West Bank since it was occupied by Israel in the 1967 war.

In other moves to try to end the disturbances, the Israeli army ordered troops out of the West Bank town of Hebron, barred a rabbi from Hebron for allegedly sparking riots there last week, and closed for 14 days a Palestinian newspaper in Arab Jerusalem that had called for continued demonstrations.

The actions came on the eve of a U.N. Security Council meeting to consider Moslem charges that Israel is trying to wrest Temple Mount and other religious sites from Islamic authority.

Israel, which had followed a policy of boycotting any meeting where the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) was represented, has announced it will attend the debate even though the PLO also will be present.

A pre-Christian Jewish temple once stood on Temple Mount, and two mosques are located there now, making it hallowed to both Jews and Moslems.

The West Bank rioting erupted six weeks ago after a Jerusalem magistrate ruled that Jews could pray on the mount. Police continued the ban on Jewish prayers despite the verdict and the three-judge supreme court backed them, saying authorities can determine who may worship at a holy site if public order is involved.

Closed for two weeks by Israeli military censors was the newspaper A-Shaab. The paper, with a circulation of 10,000, is the largest Arabic language newspaper in Jerusalem.

It had carried a PLO article appealing to "all forces, official and unofficial, to help the rising of the Palestinian people in the occupied territories." Last month A-Shaab was closed for eight days for allegedly violating Israeli censorship rules.

Defense Minister Shimon Peres ordered the withdrawal of Israeli troops from Hebron after meeting with the city's Arab mayor, Sheikh Ali Ja'abri. Ja'abri said Saturday he was resigning because Israeli soldiers who were pursuing rioters invaded City Hall. He did not say after meeting Peres if he planned to retract the resignation.

The military government banned Rabbi Moshe Levinger, firebrand leader of 1,400 Jews living in a compound near Hebron, from entering the Arab town. Last week Rabbi Levinger and some of the Jewish settlers in Hebron intervened in army efforts to quell riots, and Levinger ordered his men to fire at demonstrators' legs if necessary, the military officials charged.

British Press Raps Princess's Conduct

London (UPI) — Britain's newspapers took off the gloves Sunday for a bout of public criticism of Princess Margaret of a kind rarely directed at the royal family.

One spoke of "Princess Margaret's young lover" and said "her new romance" was responsible for the break up of her 16-year marriage to Lord Snowdon, the former Anthony-Armstrong Jones.

The queen's sister and her photographer husband announced their separation Friday. The Observer newspaper said the couple's close friends assume the separation "to be only the first stage in an orderly progress towards divorce" in two years' time.

Direct public criticism of any member of the royal family is most unusual in Britain. Newspapers and magazines criticize, if at all, by innuendo or indirection or by citing monarcy baiters like Member of Parliament Willie Hamilton.

But restraints dissolved Sunday in the wake of the separation announcement. Sunday newspapers were almost unanimously critical.

"The public has the right to question whether Princess Margaret is setting the sort of example that is expected from British royalty," said the Sunday People in an editorial which occupied its entire front page.

"If her private life isn't going to measure up to the royal standard, wouldn't she be well advised to withdraw entirely from the royal family business?" it asked.

The Sunday Mirror said that at 45, "Margaret will have to make it abundantly clear to everyone that she is not only ready but willing to turn her back on the frivolous, often bordering on irresponsible, social set which has fascinated her for so long."

"Does she really imagine that from now on she will help the royal image?" asked a columnist in the Sunday Express.

"Especially if young Mr. Roddy Llewellyn, in jeans and sweatshirt, ends up, hands clasped behind his back, walking the statutory five paces behind?"

The News of the World, in a copyright dispatch, pinned the "lover" tag on Llewellyn, 28. It said the princess calls him "my darling angel" and that their love had transformed their lives.

The newspaper also cited their vacations on the Caribbean Island of Mustique and Margaret's visits to Llewellyn's uppercrust "commune" in the English countryside.

"Perhaps most impetuous of all," the News of the World said, "Roddy made overnight visits to Margaret's home, Kensington Palace."

Gauger To Introduce Citizens' Street Plan

County Commissioner Jan Gauger agreed Sunday to introduce at the next Officials Committee meeting a plan for widening Fremont Street drafted by the Fremont Citizens Neighborhood Organization.

Mrs. Gauger, who is chairman of the Officials Committee, said she has no reason for not supporting the proposal now but will consult with county officials before deciding whether to support as well as introduce it.

County Commissioner Bruce Hamilton, who also attended the Sunday meeting between Mrs. Gauger, the Fremont Neighborhood Organization and the Lincoln Alliance, said he would give the proposal his unqualified support.

The proposal states that Fremont shall be designated a two-lane 38-foot-wide arterial from 48th to 70th, with only one parking lane and no less than two lights per block, and that adequate storm sewers shall be installed.

The Officials Committee had recommended that Fremont be widened to four lanes with concrete medians from 48th to 56th, and to two lanes from 56th until 70th.

The City Council held a hearing two weeks ago on the project and is expected to reach a decision within a few weeks.

BEEP Is A Winner For Northwest Lincoln Group

The Northwest Lincoln Community Association is the first winner of the Energy Action Award Program.

The award is given by the Mayor's Energy Action Committee, formed last week by Mayor Helen Boosalis.

Criteria for the award are: the program or project must be innovative and educational, responsive to the needs of the community, use energy efficiently and be in use.

The Northwest Lincoln Community Association will receive the award for its Belmont Energy Efficiency Project. BEEP informed residents of rooftop heat loss indicated by Cengas Thermograms, and installed insulation in nearly 60 northwest area homes.

Approximately $6,700 worth of insulation was bought by the community association and resold at a reasonable price to area residents, association president Vern Pelowski said.

Volunteers publicized the project and helped install the insulation. They included students from Goodrich Junior High and Lincoln High, along with groups from the Boy and Girl Scouts and Campfire Girls.

Hand Tools, Parts Worth $800 Stolen

A Lincoln man has reported the theft of more than $500 worth of hand tools and a tool box and $300 worth of diesel engine parts from a pickup parked at his residence Friday or Saturday.

Police said that John Rethwisch reported the items were taken from the truck owned by Lincoln Equipment Co, while it was parked at 2600 S. 58th St.

'Handshaker' To Make Educators' Jobs Easier

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln Public Schools officials have uncrated a computer that Marvin M. Miller says will "do the handshaking" between school building terminals and the heart of the system.

That handshaker is a PDP 11/70, a Digital Equipment Corp. machine that's "just the beginning" of a plan to make educators' jobs easier, said Miller, data processing supervisor.

"One of the main goals the district has set is to have terminals in every school building by sometime during the next school year."

During the current academic year, Miller said, "we hope to put terminals in maybe up to 10 buildings" for pilot testing, debugging and development. "It should be a very simple matter then to expand those programs" districtwide.

It'll Have Three Duties

The new handshaking machine will have three main duties initially, Miller said: sending routine information between school terminals and central data files, filling teacher orders for media items, and aiding the System I reading program.

In the communicating function, the PDP will allow a building principal in his school to send an electronic request for a student's date of birth or home address, for example. The handshaker will introduce the request to the main computer, which will send the information to a printout in front of the principal.

Related administrative uses include checking for accuracy of account numbers or equipment inventories.

If teachers now want a particular film to show a class, they must send a written request through school mail; it gets processed at the media center, then goes to the computer center, where it's checked against an inventory file.

But those teachers might not learn until the day before they need it that the film's not available, Miller said, noting resulting scheduling problems.

Now It'll Be Seconds

The new computer will have teachers follow the same process, except that they'll step up to their building terminal, request the film "and in a matter of seconds" learn if they can use it when they want, Miller said.

If it's already booked, teachers can follow the same procedure for alternates.

To streamline the System I reading program, the PDP works this way: A teacher sends via the terminal a student's test results covering specific objectives. If certain material hasn't been mastered, "the computer will look through some files pre-established by teachers and an appropriate set of instructions will be printed out to the student," Miller said.

Instructions May Vary

The instructions, for example, could include a list of exercises in a particular book, could suggest listening to a tape recording, or reading part of a specific book.

Sending the printout back to the building takes "a short period of time, so the student can continue work," he said.

The district's electronic transformation began in 1966, and in May 1974 moved into its modern computer plan by buying the first major piece of a five-year $1 million project.

THE OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC

MARCH 22-28, 1976

See the school boy, chasing his hat.

Spread manure over these late snows on your garden (the melting snow will carry the goodness of it into the soil) . . . Third quarter of the moon March 22 . . . Woodchucks emerge now and begin to mate . . . Average length of days for the week, 12 hours, 24 minutes . . . Americans now spend $600,000,000 on hot dogs annually . . . Sixty-foot waves delay Queen Mary's U.S. arrival March 22, 1959 . . . You will never get ahead trying to get even.

Old Farmer's Riddle: Who were the shortest and tallest Presidents? (Answer below.)

Ask the Old Farmer: I am not very superstitious about walking under ladders, black cats crossing my path, knocking on wood, etc. But I must say Friday the 13th bothers me. Can you tell me how this superstition came about? S.A., Albany, N.Y.

It is supposed to have been Friday when Christ was crucified and plenty of folks think it unlucky to do most anything on that day.

Home Hints: A heavy paper strip holds a tiny screw when your fingers can't. Punch hole to hold the screw and rip off paper once it's started . . . Riddle answer: James Madison was 5'4" short. Abraham Lincoln was 6'4" tall.

OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECASTS

Central Great Plains: First part of week rainy in central and south, mixed with snow in northeast, then colder; sunny and cold latter part, with flurries in north and showers in south.

Floods Kill 12 In South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Heavy floods spawned by torrential rains left at least 12 persons dead in a suburb of the South African port city of Durban, and the eventual death toll may be much higher, officials said Sunday.

Another 1,500 persons have been evacuated from their homes in the Springfield area of Durban. Many of the homes were completely submerged after the Umgeni River overflowed its banks following torrential rain Saturday and Sunday.

Helicopters being used in the rescue operation have managed to lift 72 people to safety so far.

Lodge News — The "Sunday Journal and Star" has it.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Monday, March 22

Career matters should boom for Cancer during month of April. Many born under this zodiacal sign will find their prestige on upswing, their standing in community to be elevated. There will be some hard decisions, more pressure and responsibility. Some in public life may have second thoughts about continuing along the same path. In the main, however, the Cancer native will meet challenges, hurdle obstacles, deal with an aggressive Aries and be stimulated by what occurs next month.

☆ ☆ ☆

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Emphasis on prestige, vindication of views. You're given more of a free hand. You can exercise authority. Don't abuse privilege. You'll be dealing with Capricorn, Aquarius individuals. The "boss" calls you in for strategy meeting.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Good Moon aspect coincides now with chance to communicate, correspond, add to knowledge. Give full play to intellectual curiosity. Ask questions, put together puzzle pieces. Individual at a distance will "get in touch."

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Dig deep for information; reject superficial answers. Investigate on your own. Get ideas, thoughts on paper. Key now is ability to communicate. Feelings, impulses, emotions tend to dominate, especially where loved one is concerned.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accent on legal agreement, cooperative effort and relationship that could be "permanent." This is no time to play games. Chips are down and stakes are high — if you are not serious, let "other party" go.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Basic issues count more than a recent past. Key is dedication, organization, intensity of purpose. Cancer, Capricorn could be involved. Your work, associates, special services are spotlighted. Study Cancer message.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your "creative urge" manifests. You feel, perceive and imprint. Your style is recognized. Your uniqueness is appreciated, rewarded. On personal level, you overcome obstacle and make known desires to one who "wants to know." A productive day!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Highlight qualities of originality, independence. Refuse to be intimidated. Make your own views loud and clear. Leo, Aquarius could figure prominently. Build on solid base and insist on getting premium price for plans, abilities, products. You can do it!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Emphasis on short trips, an understanding of relative who seems pulled in two directions at one and the same time. You won't get all answers, but you will gain insights. Aquarian figures prominently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent on money, valuables, personal possessions. Active, alert, restless persons play key roles. Gemini, Virgo and Sagittarius figure prominently. Communications from afar make impact. You could also be recepient of a "spiritual revelation."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Lunar cycle high — trust yourself. Invest in your own talents, abilities. Your judgment, intuition is likely to be on target. You get accolades from those who, in recent past, stubbornly refused to concede. Be gracious, but stick to "hard line."

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are on brink of discovery. Know it and be persistent. Gemini, Virgo could be in picture. One in hospital may want you to "run errand." Comply with request. Much that occurs could be of clandestine nature.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Spotlight on friends, hopes, wishes. Home environment improves — if you are reasonable. Taurus, Libra and Scorpio persons figure prominently. You could receive surprise gift. One with melodious voice is in picture.

IF MARCH 22 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are independent, somewhat of a maverick, on your own in thought, action at an early age. Scorpio persons play important roles in your life. You travel more this year and May will be your most significant month. You are headstrong, stubborn, loyal and dedicated. Emotional weight has been lifted. Be happy!

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
